John M. Imrie, Civic Leader, Dies In Sleep

Publisher and managing director of The Edmonton Journal for 20 years and prominent in many fields of community welfare, John Mills Imrie died at his home, 10360 Connaught Drive, Thursday night. He had been in ill health for several years, as a result of which he resigned his position in January of this year. Death came in his sleep. He was 58 years old.

Guiding the policy and affairs of the Edmonton Journal from July 1, 1921, until he laid down the reins of leadership, he had played a very prominent part in civic affairs during his years here.

In addition to his newspaper work, he was active in many fields of endeavor. Although he was an easterner by birth, he was an ardent champion of the Canadian west, and did all in his power to further progress and growth in the younger provinces of the dominion.

Of unfailing good humor, he had a good word and a kindly smile for all. Although his activities were restricted in recent months, he was up and about recently.

Less than two weeks ago he visited the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Fusiliers, (R), CA, while out on manoeuvres and complimented officers and men on their showing.

He took part in the shaping of the life of the Peace River country, being a firm believer that the district would become one of the most important sections of the province.

TOURED ROUND WORLD

About 10 years ago, he travelled around the world, and put to excellent use the knowledge he gained during the trip. A fluent speaker, he was called upon on many occasions to speak of his findings in the Orient and in Russia, to large audiences in Edmonton and elsewhere. His services as a speaker were sought eagerly by community service and other organizations, and

LOSE HEAVILY AT SEVASTOPOL

Power Of Nazi Offensive Waning

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, June 19.—(AP)—Waning of Germany's offensive power was implied by Maj.-Gen. Nikolaj Zhuravlev, military observer of the Moscow News, today and the Soviet information bureau said Nazi shock troops again had lost heavily during fierce but futile attacks upon Sevastopol.

NEW YORK, June 19.—(AP)—The BBC heard by CBS here, quoted German reports today that the Russians had made a landing on the Crimean coast near Kerch, and that Russian marines attempted another landing near Yalta, southeast of Sevastopol.

Coincident with the opening of the third week of the Axis drive against Sevastopol, Crimean naval base besieged since November 7, it was announced that drenching thunderstorms had slowed fighting in an associated operation on the Kharkov front, 400 miles to the north.

A communique said Russian units in a Kharkov front area had killed more than 1,000 Germans and destroyed nine tanks in repulsing attacks over a three-day period. The dates were not announced.

Northwest of Moscow, the Germans were reported driven out of several positions on the Kalinin front.

(Russian officials ignored a claim by the German high command that its forces had stormed Sevastopol's northern fortifications and were within two miles of the harbor entrance.)

"The heroic defenders of Sevastopol courageously and staunchly beat off numerous German attacks," the information bureau reported of yesterday's engagements.

Nazis Claim U.S. Airplanes Cross Turkey

LONDON, June 19. — (CP) — Reuters said today it had recorded a Berlin broadcast by DNB reporting that 13 or 14 United States aircraft making for the Black Sea flew over Turkish territory last night

(United States bombers visited the Black Sea region a week ago and four of them made forced landings in Turkey.)

ANKARA, June 19.—(AP)—German charges that four United States bombers forced down last week in Turkey "deliberately flew over Turkey on their way to objectives on the north coast of the Black Sea," were denied today after an investigation by Turkish officials.

Reports reaching Istanbul said the big four-motor Consolidated Liberator bombers were part of a force which attacked the Romanian oil centre of Ploesti and the Black Sea port of Constanta.

The official answer to the German charges was published by Anatolia agency, which said:

"According to declarations made by the United States government to the Turkish embassy in Washington and in Ankara by Ambassador Steinhart to the Turkish government, the American planes did not intend to fly over Turkish territory on outward or inward flights, and made forced landings at Ankara and Arifiye for safety.

"No other planes landed. Questioning of the interned crews shows this to be the situation."

Japanese Situation In B.C. Is Discussed In House Commons

OTTAWA, June 19.—(CP)—T. J. O'Neill (Lib., Kamloops) today precipitated a discussion in the House of Commons on the Japanese situation in British Columbia, by moving adjournment of the house to discuss a matter of "urgent public importance."

He said the people of British Columbia are "extremely disturbed by the way the Japanese question is being handled—and when I say disturbed I mean just that."

He said there are camps where the guards have only one gun and 12 rounds of ammunition.

Premier Makes Trip To States With High British Army Chiefs

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON, June 19.—(AP)—Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime prime minister, and President Roosevelt put their heads together at a secret rendezvous today over win-the-war strategy, and an abundance of factors added to a conviction of either side of the Atlantic they were weighing plans for opening a second front in Europe.

Churchill

Roosevelt

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said he considered speculation on a second front "perfectly justified."

It was Early who announced last night that Mr. Churchill had come to United States a second time within seven months, bringing with him some of his top-flight military advisers, for conferences on "the war, the conduct of the war, and the winning of the war."

May Start War Off On New Tangent

The spectacular trip of Mr. Churchill and his party to the United States converted it for the time being into headquarters for a major segment of the military high command of the United Nations. The entire world looked toward Washington, as a result, for portentous decisions which might start the war off on a new and fateful tangent.

But the President's usual Friday press conference was cancelled, and Early said no statements are expected either from the prime minister or Mr. Roosevelt during the rest of the week.

There was not the slightest tendency here to minimize significance of the Churchill-Roosevelt deliberations, coming as they did so soon after Russia's foreign commissar, V. M. Molotov, had made secret visits to London and Washington.

As soon as Molotov was safely back in Moscow, announcements were forthcoming of an Anglo-Russian 20-year mutual assistance pact and of an understanding among Great Britain, Russia and the United States on "the urgent task of creating a second front in Europe in 1942."

Molotov's trip was widely regarded as an integral part of recently-developing Allied strategy designed to keep the common enemy worrying over signposts pointing in the general direction of another fighting front.

SIGNPOSTS OF ACTION

Among the signposts were these: The second front could be counted on to siphon off some of the Nazi strength now concentrated on offensives which have set British forces back in Libya and hammered with terrific force at the doughty Russian armies in the Crimea and on the Kharkov sector.

Britain in recent weeks has stepped up air raids on continental objectives to a tremendous degree and promised to send 1,000 planes a night over Nazi-held war production centres of western Europe.

The United States sent her ranking generals to Britain in recent weeks for war councils with their British counterparts, and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of the staff of the United States Army, declared "the time for action is near."

HEAVY REINFORCEMENTS

The United States army in northern Ireland has been reinforced repeatedly by some of the largest troop convoys ever sent overseas.

The make-up of the military mission that arrived with Mr. Churchill was of a type to lend encouragement to the idea that conversations touching on a second front were in progress.

For example, Mr. Churchill brought along Sir Alan Frans Brooke, chief of the Imperial general staff, who believes in military innovations and who is regarded by many persons as Britain's outstanding authority on mechanization. While inspecting American troops in northern Ireland last month he told them their opportunity to fight "will come soon."

Another in the party is Maj.-Gen. Sir Hastings L. Ismay, deputy military secretary to the war cabinet and chief of staff to Mr. Churchill in the Prime Minister's capacity as defence minister.

A third military expert in the mission is Brig.-Gen. G. M. Stewart, director of plans for the war office.

SHIPPING DISCUSSION

Conjectures about a second front immediately suggested the shipping situation would figure prominently in the conversations. Linked with that problem was the question of overall naval strategy and the distribution of the combat units of the fleet between overseas convoy duty and protection of shipping along the coasts.

Shipping drew some of the attention of the Pacific War Council when it met at the White House Wednesday and Walter Nash, New Zealand minister to the United States, said afterward the situation is improving and some 'real good news' might develop.

Assurances of adequate shipping might well be a major factor influencing an immediate decision on opening another front, since cargo vessels and transports would be absolutely essential to take troops and weapons to a new battle line.

PROSPECT OF CANUCK ACTION DISCUSSED

By B. T. RICHARDSON
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 19.—Whether Prime Minister Churchill will visit Ottawa in the course of his visit to North America took second place in speculation here to the question whether his second trans-Atlantic visit in six months presaged a second front and the extent to which Canada will participate in it.

Canada itself could not open a second front, but possesses a powerful mechanized army standing ready in Britain. This army represents a factor of high importance in the strategy of a second front. Its use is at the disposal of the United Nations, in consultation with the Canadian government, just as formerly it was at the disposal of the British war office after consultation with Canada.

No information was available here whether Prime Minister King would join the new Washington conferences. Last time Churchill came to North America, certain political figures and newspapers made capital out of an accusation that Mackenzie King and Canada had been ignored. The prime minister's office disclosed today that Mr. King had been informed of the impending visit, as he was last time.

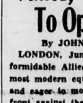
Canucks, With Allies, Eager To Open Front

By JOHN PARRIS

LONDON, June 19—(BUP)—A formidable Allied army with the most modern equipment is ready and eager to move into a second front against the Axis in Europe or the Near East if Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt give the order.

These forces, which might be used in Europe to force Hitler to weaken more distant fronts or might be rushed to other world sectors, include:



Parris

About 1,500,000 highly-trained British troops, plus a big Canadian striking force which some sources estimate at 200,000 troops and a formidable force of Poles, Free French, Czechs, Belgians, Norwegians and Dutch.

United States expeditionary forces in the British Isles are being steadily reinforced and have excellent equipment, believed to exceed the fire power of German armored strength in Libya.

The R.A.F. could provide a protective umbrella for assault forces comparable to the support which the Luftwaffe gave the German forces in Belgium and France.

The R.A.F. has grown in all types of planes, and must be stronger than the Luftwaffe, although there is no indication in official sources whether Allied air support now is considered strong enough to support a full scale invasion of Europe.

Ships for an invasion army still are the great problem, but the United States navy units are reinforcing the British Home Fleet and the combination probably could stop any forces Germany could throw into the battle.

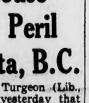
Warning Sounded In House On Gravity Of Jap Peril To People In Alberta, B.C.

OTTAWA, June 19. — (CP) — J. G. Turgeon (Lib., Cariboo) said in the House of Commons yesterday that Japanese occupation of some Aleutian islands constituted a serious threat to Canada.

Speaking in the conscription debate, he said: "The Japanese are virtually upon the coast of Canada.

"We in this house and people in Montreal, Toronto, may continue to be protagonists of a dispute and may continue to argue.

"But my word of warning is this, that we from British Columbia, Alberta and the Yukon are not going to sit down and wait while that question is argued and permit the Japanese devils to raid, rape and slaughter and torture us. And that is the condition which this country is facing today."



J. G. Turgeon

He said this was the serious season with the Arctic ocean open to navigation from June to September by ships equipped with ice-breaking apparatus.

"There may be nothing whatever in the combination of facts that just about when that northern sea is opening Japan has taken possession of some of the Aleutian islands. . . .

"I am of the opinion that before long we are going to find Japan attacking Russia and that this is the cause of this first move into the Aleutian islands.

If the Japanese gained control of airfields in Siberia as well as Aleutian bases there was every likelihood of an attack upon British Columbia.

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS P. KEEMLE

Copyright, 1942, by the British United Press and The Edmonton Bulletin

The British reverse in Libya so far is only a tactical defeat, but it has much graver implications. Control of the eastern Mediterranean may be at stake, and the loss of such control would be a body blow to the Allies.

Domination of that area, it is now apparent, depends mainly on supremacy in the air. The Italian fleet, crippled by British and American bombers, may be dismissed as a negligible factor, land based planes will decide the issue.

If Axis bombers can pin the British fleet into the eastern pocket of the Mediterranean and open a good supply route to Libya, Col. Gen Erwin Rommel will have a chance

British Lash Back At Axis In Libyan War

CAIRO, Egypt, June 19.—(AP)—Lashing back after withdrawing to strong new positions along the Egyptian frontier, Britain's desert fighters were harassing the right flank of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Axis armies today in an effort to reduce pressure on Tobruk.

That stronghold apparently was virtually cut off from overland communications by the British withdrawal and the Germans were reported moving up great 210-millimetre guns (8.26 inches in diameter)—the largest mobile weapons ever used in the desert—to bring it under siege.

In an attempt to impede these operations, a British communique disclosed, swift mechanized units of Lt.-Gen. Neil Ritchie's 8th army swept out from the new border line and knifed in behind Rommel's forces in a swift surprise attack from the south.

The communique indicated the Tobruk defenders were holding strong positions and the post appeared in no immediate danger.

Re-establishment of the forces followed withdrawals, announced yesterday, from the desert towns of El Adem and Sidi Rezegh, south and southeast of Tobruk, the Mediterranean port which British forces have held almost 17 months through offensive and counter-offensive.

LONDON, June 19—(BUP)—Britain's army in North Africa may be compelled to abandon Tobruk, its fortress on the Libya coast 80 miles from the frontier, a British military commentator said today.

The coal of British reverses in Libya might, it was believed in well-informed quarters, be loss of control of the Mediterranean unless dive bombers could turn the tide.

Supreme Soviet Ratifies New Treaty With Britain

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, June 19—(AP)—Thundering a vote of complete confidence, the supreme Soviet last night at its first wartime session ceremonially approved the Anglo-Russian treaty after hearing Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov express the deep hope that the "common enemy soon will feel on his own skin the mighty blows" of Russia, Britain and the United States.

Molotov told the cheering Russian parliament, as Premier-Defence Commissar Joseph Stalin nodded agreement, that the question of a second front in Europe was given "serious attention" both in London and in Washington. In the latter city Molotov concluded a full understanding with the United States on the war and on post-war problems.

(The three great world powers announced on June 11 that they had reached complete understanding on "the urgent tasks of creating a second front in Europe in 1942.")

INVITED BY F.D.R.

Molotov disclosed that President Roosevelt had cabled an invitation to the trip which resulted in the Washington agreement.

He told the Supreme Soviet that the Washington agreement would accelerate and increase deliveries to the Soviet Union in spite of the

SERIOUS THREAT TO MALTA SEEN

Libya Reverses May Cost Control Of Mediterranean

Rommel's Strategy To Drive Fleet Into Eastern Waters With Land Based Aircraft

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE

LONDON, June 19.—(BUP)—The cost of British reverses in Libya may be control of the Mediterranean Sea, unless Allied dive bombers can turn the tide.

Results of the offensive by forces under Nazi Col. Gen. Erwin Rommel still are incomplete, but British military experts drew three conclusions today from the sudden reversal that snatched success from the Allies by a narrow margin:

1—Rommel apparently hopes to secure bases from which land based airplanes might squeeze the British fleet into the eastern end of the Mediterranean and keep it there. This would gravely endanger Malta if successful.

2—The British eighth army under Lt-Gen. Neil M. Ritchie was within an ace of victory that might have ended the whole North African war, but Rommel daringly took advantage of weaknesses in Allied desert equipment and used Stuka dive bombers skillfully to gain control of the main battlefields and to salvage a mass of damaged equipment.

3—The British are greatly improved but still have not fully mastered the technique of desert mechanized warfare due partly to failure to build up strong dive-bomber squadrons.

LACKED DIVE-BOMBERS

Air power played its usual important role in the success of Rommel's operations on the Tobruk front and of special significance was the weakness of the British in use of dive bombers.

In general, the R.A.F. was able to maintain air superiority throughout the most intensive fighting, although the Berlin radio contended that the Luftwaffe was able to establish local superiority. But it was obvious that the German divebombers were highly effective and that the British lacked places to compete with the Stukas, especially at Bir Hacheim when the first big break through came.

Air experts here said that Britain must learn the value of dive bombers in desert warfare and that, in view of failure to develop such craft, they must depend heavily on use of American dive bombers flown by R.A.F. pilots or perhaps by American fliers. Until then it was emphasized, Britain can only pay a high price for lack of dive-bomber assault planes.

Other lessons which British experts said they learned in the Tobruk area included:

Tanks—The American-built General Grant tank proved to be an excellent weapon in many respects but its 75 gun has too low a muzzle velocity.

NOT ENOUGH TANKS

There were not enough General Grant tanks and the average allied tank in the desert was unable to withstand the fire power of the German Mark 4 tanks. The Axis tanks as well as the Allied tanks have been improved and at present we are no more than keeping pace with the enemy in improved mechanized design, according to British experts.

It is necessary that we outstrip the enemy in design and outproduce him, by a very substantial margin in view of the fact that our supply routes are much longer and more difficult than those of the Axis.

Artillery—The British 25-pounder is still regarded as an exceptionally fine product and the six-pounder anti-tank gun is a great improvement. But the Allies had nothing in the desert to match the German 88, which the British regard as one of the greatest weapons developed in this war. By massing them near Knightsbridge and ambushing a British column, Rommel inflicted heavy casualties at a critical time in the battle.

ROMMEL SUPERIOR

Technique — The British have made great headway in mastering the Nazi method of desert warfare but Rommel still was able to coordinate his tanks, planes and guns into a single team that we could not match.

Ritchie, however, has a large nucleus of well-trained officers and British military circles feel that next time they may well prove superior to the Nazi technique.

Recovery—The British system of recovery and repair of damaged mechanized equipment has made great strides to compete with the German system, which often made extensive repairs overnight.

Mr. Justice G. B. O'Connor in supreme court Friday granted a decree nisi of divorce to Wilfred J. Beaudry from Ruth E. Beaudry.

Planning To Speed Scrap Rubber Use

OTTAWA, June 19—(CP)—The munitions and supply department said today new instructions have been issued to all tire dealers with the aim of speeding up complete utilization of scrap rubber.

Scrap dealers who peel the tread off used tires cannot apply it to other used tires but must turn it over to reclaim or rubber manufacturers of Fairmont Co., Ltd., the government-owned company which sells its scrap rubber to such manufacturers. In this way the department said, tread peelings can be converted into the production of essential rubber goods.

To assist in conserving rubber dealers must no longer leave used tires or tubes lying around their premises. Wherever a tire or tube can be made safe for regular service on a vehicle, it must be reconditioned and offered for sale by a dealer. Should it prove unfit for automobile use, it may be employed as repair material, outside of the tread peel, for other tires or tubes.

All scrap, however, must be sold promptly to manufacturers for conversion into reclaim rubber.

German Troops Train Wrecked

VICHY, June 19.—(AP)—Another German troops train has been wrecked by saboteurs in occupied France and attempts at sabotage have been made against two other trains, it was revealed today.

The new efforts at sabotage became known when rewards to French railway men for preventing damage to trains were announced. In one case, the announcement said, a German troop train was wrecked and caught fire, but the blaze was brought under control.

In another case, two French linesmen discovered a railway bridge had been mined, and signalled an express train in time to halt it. The third reward was given to a workman who apparently repaired some rails which had been damaged.

A man and woman were arrested in Paris yesterday, charged with smashing the window of a German employment bureau, another announcement said. A third demonstrator escaped.

he never failed to champion the west's cause.

Prime mover in the founding of the Community Chest in Edmonton, he gave full support to the successful drive for funds for the province welfare work in the city. He was the first president of the organization, which was founded last year.

When the Rowell Commission on Dominion-provincial relations sat here, he submitted a brief, which he had personally prepared, as chairman of a special Chamber of Commerce committee. The commission went out of its way to compliment him on the excellence, thoroughness and scholarly preparation.

He had been chairman and vice-chairman of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, and had been an active member of the local chamber. He took part in the trade mission to the Orient in 1930, and from 1934 until his death, was vice-president of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

INTERESTED IN SCOUTS

Mr. Imrie was also a member of the national council of the Boy Scouts' Association and the St. John Ambulance Association, and president of the Alberta division of the latter organization from 1933 to 1935.

Keen supporter of the arts, he gave wholehearted support to the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra when it was first founded and throughout its career. From 1933 until his death was honorary vice-president of the Edmonton Museum of Arts.

IS HONORED

In 1934, Mr. Imrie was made a commander officer of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, in recognition of his work over a long period.

Interested in international relations and Pacific problems, Mr. Imrie was a member of the Canadian delegation to the Institute of Pacific Relations conference at Banff in 1933. From 1935 to 1939, he was chairman of the advisory board of the University of Alberta branch of the Student Christian Movement.

Mr. Imrie was a member of the committee of Alberta publishers that fought the Alberta Press Act, 1937, before the supreme court of Canada at Ottawa, and before the privy council. In recognition of this fight, The Journal received in 1938 a Pulitzer bronze plaque. This was the first Pulitzer prize ever awarded outside the United States.

He was a director of The Southam Publishing Co., Ltd., and The Southam Securities, Ltd.

BORN AT TORONTO

Born in Toronto, October 21, 1883, son of John and Elizabeth (McJannet) Imrie, he was educated at public and technical schools in Toronto. He began his business career as manager of the Imrie Printing Co., Ltd., Toronto, in 1905, and continued there until 1909. Successively, he was editor and manager of the Porter and Dunlop Co., "Bookseller and Stationer", and assistant general manager of the Hamilton Spectator, until 1921, when he came to Edmonton as managing director and publisher of The Edmonton Journal.

From 1911 to 1919, he was manager of the Canadian Press Association, and in 1920 was manager of the Canadian Daily Newspapers' Association, Toronto.

He married Lizzie Ann Hammer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Hammer of Lindsay, on Sept. 18, 1907. Mr. Imrie is survived by his wife and one daughter, Marie Louise.

He was a member of the National Club of Toronto, the Mayfair Golf and Country Club, the Edmonton Club and the Glencoe Club.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later, by Howard and McBride.

Death of Mr. Imrie caused general regret in all sections of the city and on all sides were heard expressions to this effect and of profound sympathy to his family.

Below are some of the tributes paid to Mr. Imrie:

Hon. J. C. Bowen, lieutenant-governor: I am shocked at the news of Mr. Imrie's sudden death. He was a wonderful citizen, and many important institutions benefited greatly from his generosity and counsel. He will be missed from the public life not only of the city but of the province. In his personal life he was a man of high ideals and principles, which he applied to private and public affairs alike. In my own association with him, which I always appreciated greatly, I found him kind and helpful in the discharge of his government, and rich in experience. His contributions to good citizenship in Edmonton and Alberta will not be forgotten.

Premier William Aberhart: In the death of Mr. Imrie, a citizen of note in many fields has been lost to Alberta. His interests ranged far and wide, and he was known in many circles outside his chosen profession and his own province. As a fine citizen, he was actively concerned about the welfare of the country at large, and especially of the west since he came to live here. I feel that he will be missed from the life of Alberta. Of Mr. Imrie it can be said in all sincerity that he played well his part and contributed in an unusual way to the public weal.

Mayor Fry: Mr. Imrie's death is a great shock to us all. One of this city's finest citizens, he was highly respected by all who knew him. At all times he was guided by the best of ideals and the loss to us is great. His civic interests were so widespread that his influence was not just felt by only one group but by many. Truly, he was a great man.

Chief Justice Harvey: It is a terrible shock to me to learn of Mr. Imrie's death. He was a most prominent citizen and was respected by all who knew him well. His work was most beneficial to the community and even to the dominion. He was a wonderful gentleman. My most sincere sympathies go to Mrs. Imrie and her daughter.

Mr. Justice Ford, chancellor of the University of Alberta: I regret very much to hear of the death of Mr. Imrie. In him not only Edmonton but Canada has lost a distinguished citizen, a man who will be missed in many activities. He not only was a brilliant journalist but an excellent speaker, who, above all, desired to give his most useful service to his fellow man.

A. M. MacDonald, president, Edmonton Chamber of Commerce: John Imrie has left a prominent record of his initiative in Edmonton, and the many organizations with which he was connected bear testimony to the fact that initiative and his untiring interest. His contribution through his work in the Chamber of Commerce was marked by his insight and sane judgment. His sympathetic co-operation with worthwhile community projects and executive ability made him one of Edmonton's outstanding citizens. We shall miss him sorely.

Lt.-Col. Cameron, M.M., E.D., area commandant: I deeply regret the passing of a citizen, who has played such a prominent and honorable part in the affairs of the city of Edmonton. In my own case the regret is also of a deep personal nature. As an employee of the newspaper directed by Mr. Imrie for several years, I knew him as a kind and considerate friend. Later I was often associated with him in affairs concerning civic and military activities in Edmonton. He never ceased to work for the best interests of Edmonton. We have lost a fine, public-spirited citizen.

W. T. Henry, first president of the Council of Social Agencies and now honorary president of that group: It was a great shock to me when I learned of Mr. Imrie's passing. I was closely connected with him in social welfare work and considered him one of my closest friends. He was a splendid, thorough gentleman and a loyal friend. He will be missed greatly in this community as well as in the rest of Canada as he was almost a national figure. My heartfelt sympathy goes out to his family.

W. Dick: It is a great shock to hear of Mr. Imrie's passing. Because of his public spiritedness, his death will mean a loss not only to Edmonton and Alberta but to Canada. With his high ideals of citizenship, he was interested in so many things. I appreciate his friendship from my association with him in work with the St. John Ambulance Brigade and the Boy Scouts association. He did much to place the work of the ambulance association where it is today. His was a great friendship toward the Boy Scout association, acting as he did as a liaison officer between the headquarters in Ottawa and the provincial group here. The association was the last thing he gave up when he became ill. His passing is a great loss.

Charles E. Campbell, publisher of The Edmonton Bulletin: I deeply regret the death of Mr. Imrie as a loss of a personal friend. I have known him personally for 17 years and considered him one of my closest friends, as a newspaperman, he gained one of the highest distinctions possible several years ago in the Pulitzer award, and in newspaper circles throughout Canada, his loss will be keenly felt. His interest in public affairs of the city and province was keen and his presentation of the case of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce before the Rowell commission was considered throughout Canada to have been the best presentation made by any chamber to the commission. My deepest sympathy goes to Mrs. Imrie and her daughter for the loss which they have suffered

J. G. Nickerson, manager, Royal Bank of Canada: John Imrie was a good friend to hundreds of Canadians, including Edmontonians, whose welfare he sought to promote with zeal and vigilance. He was an outstanding newspaperman and his ability in his chosen profession was recognized throughout the Dominion, but in Edmonton his chief achievement will be his sense of public responsibilities. He had a wide circle of friends and admirers from coast to coast and will not easily be forgotten. His friendship was highly valued by me. My deepest sympathy goes out to his widow and daughter.

Julian Garrett, president, provincial council, St. John Ambulance Association: The death of Mr. Imrie removes from this city, this province and this dominion a gentleman and a citizen of the highest order; one who for many years had played a prominent part in the business, economic and social life of this country. It is a great calamity to have a man of such high attainments and public usefulness taken from our midst. Personally I feel Edmonton has lost one of its best citizens.

A. J. Ottewell, president of Northern Alberta Pioneers and Old-Timers' Association: It is with deep regret that I learned of the death of Mr. Imrie. He was a great supporter of the city, surrounding districts and of our organization. He made many valuable contributions to the work of the pioneers' association, frequently attended and spoke at our annual round-ups.

Headaches Too Loosely Blamed In Army Cases

JASPER, June 19—(CP)—Headaches is being used as an illegitimate entitlement to compensation by members of Canada's armed forces in this war. It was asserted in a paper given by Dr. W. G. Penfield and Dr. William Cone of Montreal at the Canadian Medical Association annual convention here today.

The term "post-traumatic head syndrome" is beginning to be used as a blanket diagnosis, even in the armed services, said the paper which dealt with the brain and its treatment after injury.

The term is applied loosely to those who complain of the after effects of head injuries, the paper said, "and it may well serve only as a cloak of indifference and ignorance on the part of medical officers and eventually a ticket for pension."

The Penfield-Cone paper said that severe brain and skull injuries do occur without producing unconsciousness, but only rarely, and the state of the patient's consciousness by far the most important single factor to be considered in judging his condition.

"When a patient is unconscious followed by head injury he must be considered as concussed. Instead of that he is often neglected or left alone under the mistaken impression that moderate movement will hurt him.

MODERATE RESTRAINT

"If he is restless and hard to control restraint should be used only with moderation. It is best to put him on two mattresses on the floor and allow some latitude of movement. Never use morphine to quieten him.

"For moderate degrees of increase of intracranial pressure and the associated headaches, frequent lumbar punctures (taking some fluid from the spinal column) often give relief.

"Headache is the most frequent complaint that follows head injury but is rarely alone. It is found in mental capacity and in temper."

Clark Gable Seeks Commission In U.S. Army Air Corps

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP)—The Washington Evening Star says that Clark Gable, the movie actor, took a physical examination at Bolling Field here today, seeking a commission in the United States army air forces.

"It was understood on reliable authority," the newspaper reported, that if Mr. Gable passes the physical examination, he will be commissioned as a Major."

We feel that Edmonton has lost one of its best citizens.

H. H. Parlee, K.C.: There has died a great Canadian, one who did a great deal to develop the province of Alberta. I suffer a real personal loss in the death of Mr. Imrie as I knew him well and respected him to the utmost. He was a great citizen in every way respected by all who knew him. I extend my sympathies to his beloved wife and daughter.

Sydney Parsons, president of the Edmonton Trades and Labor council: The death of Mr. Imrie is regrettable not speaking for myself and organized labor in Edmonton, we are sorry that so fine a citizen has passed away. I have nothing about Mr. Imrie but in a kindly manner. His relations with organized labor always have been fair and reasonable. Mr. Imrie always was honest and sincere. His death is a real loss to this community and to the whole of Canada as well.

L. Y. Cairns, K.C.: In the death of Mr. Imrie, Alberta has lost one of its most useful citizens. In spite of the heavy responsibilities of his ordinary work he was always ready to place his time at the disposal of his community, and did so on a number of occasions. One of the outstanding examples of this was the work he prepared for and presenting the brief of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce to the Rowell-Sirois Commission. Mr. Imrie was recognized throughout Canada as a public speaker of ability and his services in this capacity were in demand in many parts of the Dominion. In addition to his other gifts Mr. Imrie had a genius for friendship, and this quality will cause him to be missed by a very wide circle of friends.

Ald. J. H. Ogilvie: The death of Mr. Imrie is a distinct loss to Western Canada. None had a clearer knowledge of western problems than he, and none gave more unselfishly of his time and energy to the awakening of Canadians to the necessity of finding a solution for them.

While it was known that illness compelled his retirement his age was such as gave hope for a restoration of his health. It is sad not to be and we are all the poorer.

Gerald O'Connor, K.C.: It was with deep regret that I learned of the death of Mr. Imrie. Not only was his work as managing director of The Edmonton Journal outstanding, but as a member of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce he rendered great service to the City of Edmonton. His brief on behalf of the Chamber to the Rowell-Sirois Commission was regarded as the outstanding summation to the commission in Canada. His kindliness, his generous spirit, and his infinite capacity for friendship created for him a very wide circle of friends who will mourn his passing.

Tory Head Claims Discrimination On Gasoline Rationing

MAHONE BAY, N.S., June 19—(CP)—Nova Scotia Conservative Leader Leonard W. Fraser last night voiced disapproval of what he termed "unwarranted discrimination" against the Maritime provinces in gasoline rationing.

Mr. Fraser told a meeting of the Lunenburg County Conservative Association it was unfair to say tank cars were not available to bring gasoline from Montreal to the Maritimes, while they were being used between Turner Valley, Alberta, and the head of the Great Lakes.

The west is still on a five-gallon-per-coupon basis, while coupons in the Maritimes are now worth only two gallons each.

Committee To Study Honors For Canadians

OTTAWA, June 19— (CP)— State Secretary McLarty gave notice on the House of Commons order paper today of a resolution for setting up of a Commons committee to consider the question of the awarding to Canadians of "honors and decorations which do not involve titles."

On May 14, 1919, the House of Commons adopted the report of a special committee which recommended against the granting of titles, honors and decorations.

Mr. McLarty's notice said opinion had been expressed that the applications of the principles in this report during the present war has led to "discrimination between the members of the Canadian armed forces, and other of His Majesty's armed forces, between different ranks in the Canadian armed forces; and between Canadians actively participating in the present war, and others of His Majesty's subjects."

CONTRAVENES PRINCIPLES

The notice said further that there was opinion it was "impracticable to make provision for recognition of conduct and action involving gallantry, courage, meritorious service and devotion to duty without contravening the principles of the 1919 report.

"Therefore," said Mr. McLarty's notice, "be it resolved:

"That a select committee of the house be appointed to inquire into and to report upon the expediency

"(A) of maintaining the principles that form the basis of the recommendations contained in the said (1919) report and continuing in effect the said recommendations, or

"(B) Of cancelling, altering, modifying, or adding to the said recommendations, in as far as they relate to honors and decorations which do not involve titles, and, if so, in what respect and to what extent."

REMOVES ANOMALIES

It was learned the main purpose of the proposal is to clarify the position on the question of honors for members of the armed forces and remove certain anomalies.

For instance, "fully entitled" commissioned officers and men in the Canadian army may now receive the British Empire medal but there is no corresponding decoration for commissioned officers. Non-commissioned members of the Royal Canadian Air Force may receive the Air Force and the Air Force Medal for gallant action not in the face of the enemy, such as saving the life of accidents, but there is no award for meritorious service available to Air Force officers.

Chinese Report New Jap Landing South Of Ningpo

CHUNGKING, June 19.—(AP)—A Chinese communique reported a Japanese landing yesterday on the Chekiang coast north of Taichow Bay, which is about 85 miles south of Ningpo. Swarming ashore from six warships, the invaders seized the town of Sioshuangshih, and then put it to the torch when Chinese resistance continued.

This new thrust may be the opening move of a campaign to occupy southeastern Chekiang, which has been untouched by the Japanese drive down the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway into Kiangsi province.

Air Graduates

CALGARY, June 19. — (CP) — Graduates in a class of pilots of No. 3 Service Flying Training School who received their wings today were: P. J. Christensen, Jenner; A. M. R. McGruther, Edmonton; G. B. Morris, Red Deer; H. W. Pettman, Fort Vermilion.

Weather Plays Part In Health Of Individual

JASPER, June 19. — (CP) — Temperature, wind and humidity have an effect on the health of the individual, Dr. John W. Scott of Edmonton, said at the Canadian Medical Association convention here today.

"Some diseases are prevalent in tropical countries and others in temperate climates, while still other diseases such as sunstroke and frostbite are due to a single climatic condition," he said.

Illustrating his lecture with slides, Dr. Scott showed changes in temperature and pressure in the North American continent, pointing out that the abrupt changes in Alberta makes for a stimulating type of climate, and such a climate acts as a stimulant and promotes growth.

"It is noted by authorities that diabetes is more common in a stimulating climate than in a sedative one; and acute appendicitis seldom appears in the tropics. Congestive heart failure is higher in the winter months which may be brought about by temperature changes."

He said rheumatic disease is probably more directly conditioned by climatic and weather changes than any other known disease, and added that it is from 10 to 20 times greater in the storm areas of the north than in the tropics.

Nazi U-Boat Badly Battered By Huge R.A.F. Flying Boat

LONDON, June 19.—(CP)—The B.B.C. today reported that a German U-boat, cruising in the Bay of Biscay, was intercepted and badly shattered by an R.A.F. Sunderland flying boat. The Sunderland's bombs threw the U-boat to the surface. Then, as all its bombs were gone, the Sunderland spent two hours raking the U-boat's deck and conning tower with gunfire. The Germans fired back until they were able to submerge.

TRAFFIC DEATHS

In U.S. cities of more than 10,000 population, 67 per cent. of the persons killed in automobile accidents are pedestrians, statistics show. In rural regions, only 33 per cent. are pedestrians.

Chaloult Trial Set For July 6

MONTREAL, June 19—(CP)—Judge Edmond Archambault today set for July 6 the trial of Rene Chaloult, Liberal member of the Quebec legislative assembly, on a charge laid under the Defence of Canada Regulations after a public address delivered here by the accused.

Meanwhile, the hearing was adjourned pro-forma until June 26 and June 29 after defence counsel argued for an earlier date for trial and chief crown prosecutor Gerald Fauteux said that another case would prevent him from appearing before July 6. Mr. Fauteux said that he might be ready for June 29.

The complaint charges Mr. Chaloult, who represents Lotbiniere in the Quebec house, with making declarations and affirmations before several thousand persons which would cause disaffection to The King; prejudice the success of His Majesty's armies and the armies of the Allied nations and their associates; prejudice recruiting and training and discipline of His majesty's armies; prejudice the security of the state and the successful prosecution of the war.

The statements are alleged to have been made in a speech here May 19.

ENTERS SECOND WEEK AT OTTAWA

Conscription Debate Outcome Confused And Uncertain

GO ANY LIMITS

Union Of Canada With U.S. Need For Preservation If War Lost Declares Crerar

OTTAWA, June 19.—(CP)—Resources Minister Crerar told the House of Commons yesterday that unless Germany is defeated in Europe, Canada may be forced to merge with the United States as a means of self-preservation.

He asked French-Canadian opponents of conscription what hope they would have for maintenance of the constitutional rights they enjoy in Canada if the Dominion became a part of United States.

Mr. Crerar spoke in support of the bill which opens the way for imposition of conscription for service overseas by order-in-council, just after J. S. Roy (Ind., Gaspe) said in an amendment to the bill that the government's mobilization policy might cause "civil war."

Mr. Roy's amendment said:

WARNS OF CIVIL WAR

"This house is of the opinion that the policy of the government respecting mobilization, instead of drawing closer the union of the two races in Canada, has fostered dissensions which might cause a civil war, thus destroying the ideal set forth by the Fathers of Confederation."

Mr. Crerar said that if Germany were not defeated in Europe it would be only a short time before Canada would have to fight on her own shores for her existence.

So far as he was concerned he would go to any lengths to defeat Germany in Europe and if convinced that conscription for service overseas would achieve that he would support it.

Mr. Crerar clashed with opposition members and anti-conscriptionists when he said both accepted a grave responsibility when they raised the two issues of "immediate conscription" and "conscription never." Expressions of these two extreme views caused dissension and disunity and worked for the interests of the enemy.

"ISOLATE" MEMBERS

He said he would—if he had power—place certain members in "a quiet island" for the duration of the war.

"Thank God you have not the power," Conservative House Leader Hanson interjected. He said Mr. Crerar was "the most important member of the cabinet—a washout if there ever was one."

Mr. Roy, who spoke yesterday, received special permission from the house to introduce his amendment after he had explained to Speaker Glen that he had planned to introduce it Wednesday but was prevented from doing so because the 40-minute speech limitation rule had been applied too soon, in error.

Mr. Crerar said one of the "tragedies of the situation" was the fact that the rest of Canada did not understand the French Canadians of Quebec and Quebec French Canadians did not understand the rest of Canada.

"Those who think our Quebec friends are lacking in courage were never more mistaken about anything in their lives," he said. The history of French Canada and the part being played by French Canadians in the present war proved that assertion, he said.

ALWAYS READY

Mr. Crerar said that he had been ready since the outbreak of the war and remained ready to support conscription for overseas service at any time he judged it would add to the effectiveness of Canada's war effort.

But another Liberal member, Ross Gray (Lambton West), former chief government whip, entered a plea for immediate action for unrestricted national selective service.

He declared the time for action was, "now, not six months or a year hence," and he warned that "every nation that has waited to put its house in order when the emergency arose, has fallen."

Mr. Gray was following up an appeal he made earlier this year in the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne which announced the plebiscite which was held last April 27.

On that occasion he caused a sensation when he attacked the plebiscite policy and called for immediate action for an unrestricted war effort.

APPEALS FOR UNITY

Mr. Crerar, 66-year-old veteran of several parliaments, made an appeal for unity among French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians.

He pictured the situation if Germany were not defeated in Europe and declared that the ultimate result of German conquest of Europe and all it would entail "would make Canada a part of the United States."

He asked the Quebec Liberals what their position would be in the event that the Dominion became a part of the United States.

"The French people in Canada have certain privileges and certain rights. They acquired those rights by treaty and as far as I am concerned every right they have in that respect should be recognized and should never be challenged.

"But those rights would not be preserved very long in this country if Germany triumphed in Europe and Japan in Asia.

"In my opinion it would be only a matter of time, and a comparatively short time, until we would have to fight not only on the Atlantic coast but on the Pacific coast as well.

DANGER OUTSTANDING

"Because this danger seems to me outstanding I am willing to go to any length to defeat Germany now —not when she comes to our shores. . . .

"For that reason I have no hesitation in saying that if I had believed . . . at the outbreak of the war that conscription would have added to the effectiveness of Canada's war effort, I would have been for it.

"I will say further that if the time comes when in my judgment conscription would add to the effectiveness of Canada's war effort, I would be for it. I want to make that clear."

The second week of debate on Prime Minister Mackenzie King's Bill 80 which opens the way for unlimited conscription by order-in-council, was opened yesterday by J. A. Bradette (Lib, Cochrane), resuming a speech he began Wednesday.

Mr. Bradette, a French-Canadian Northern Ontario member, said he was going to support the bill but he was doing it with the hope that the time came that unlimited conscription was necessary, the question would again be referred to parliament.

J. Sasseville Roy (Ind. Gaspe), using three minutes gained by an appeal to Speaker Glen on the grounds that he was inadvertently deprived of that period when the 40-minute speech limit was applied to him yesterday, moved an amendment to second reading of Bill 80.

His amendment was to the effect that the bill be not read a second time but that the house resolve that the government's conscription policy was likely to create dissension which might cause an internal war."

NO DECISION

There was no immediate decision as to whether the amendment would be considered in order under parliamentary rules.

Maxime Raymond (Lib. Beauharnois-LaPrairie), a prominent anti-conscriptionist, opposed the bill and said it was a violation of pledges against conscription given Quebec.

"The government respects the pledge it has given to conscientious objectors and asks no service of them," he said, "but it does not respect the equally solemn pledge it gave French-speaking Canadians."

Mr. Gray said the government should take immediate action if parliament passed Bill 80 which repeals section three of the National Resources Mobilization act—the clause restricting the use of men called under the act to service in Canada or its territorial waters.

Mr. Gray said the plebiscite question has been "purposely framed" so that the resulting vote would not be mandatory but permissive.

Of the government's handling of the manpower situation Mr. Gray, a football enthusiast, said "we have fumbled too many passes and while it must be admitted we have recovered the ball, we have left the Canadian spectators, the Canadian public, in a daze as to what we would do when we reached the five-yard line.

CRUCIAL PERIOD

"That line, sir, has been reached. The crucial period is the year 1942. This is not my opinion. It is the opinion of the military experts of the United Nations."

He referred to a question asked recently by Angus MacInnis (C.C.F., Vancouver East) as to what Canadian people expected to get out of the war.

"I can tell him in a sentence what we hope to get out of the war. We hope to get out with the privilege of being free men.

"We may lose all that we have built for the future. That matters not in this crucial hour. What does matter is that we are able to retain for the future the privilege to start again."

It was true that Canada was moving to extend the area of compulsory service to adjacent areas on the North American continent.

Some Canadians could see in this "new approach of extending our jurisdiction slightly beyond the boundaries of Canada," the "old discredited appeasement policy creeping back into our national life."

Such a policy should have no place among the United Nations and particularly in the British Empire.

SUBTLE RETREATS

"Let us put a stop to these subtle retreats from one position to another. Let us, if necessary, be brutally frank with the Canadian people and especially those who still believe in defending Canada from Canada's shores alone."

He questioned the fairness of a system that permitted some families to offer all their sons and others offer nothing.

"Is it fair that residents of Canada who are not citizens should be waiting to step into the positions opened by reasons of our own boys volunteering for active service?"

Mr. Gray referred to "insidious propaganda" being used against Canada in the United States and said it would not be overcome unless Canada was ready to send fighting men wherever necessity arose.

Total war would save the people of the world.

Mrs. Nielsen said War Services Minister Thorson had "a record for appeasement" and had been an isolationist before the war.

She said cabinet ministers should speak frankly to the Quebec people and admit past mistakes. They should admit the people of Quebec had been "an oppressed minority."

It should be part of the war effort to bring the people of Quebec up to equality with other Canadians.

"The challenge of 1942 to all Canadians is to fight or perish—together," said Mrs. Nielsen.

STRANGE BED-FELLOWS

Ernest Bertrand (Lib. Montreal-St. Antoine), said the anti-conscriptionists would vote with those who want conscription not only of manpower but of wealth and resources as well against the bill. "Truly politics makes strange bed-fellows," he said.

Raymond Eudes (Montreal-Hochelaga) opposed the bill on grounds that it would tear Canada apart, and that the Dominion might not be able to survive the effects of the struggle.

"Since I wish to serve the public good," he said, "I cannot accept the principle of this bill."

Mr. Eudes complained that while the British North America Act gave French-Canadians rights equal to those of Canadians of other stock, this principle had never been followed since Confederation. Que c had been denied a military college at which her sons could follow the profession of arms.

Maurice Gingues (Lib. Sherbrooke) said he would vote against the bill but not without regret. He would vote against it not because he feared conscription but because he had no confidence in it as a part of the war effort.

Intimating that he would oppose the bill, Martial Rheaume (Lib, St. Johns-Iberville-Napierville) lauded the part played by the Roman Catholic church of Quebec in the war effort, and scored extremists of all types.

"Our war effort is being adversely affected by extremists of several kinds, such as the head of the Orange order in Ontario and Pastor Shields of Toronto."

(Rev. T. T. Shields, pastor of Jarvis St. Baptist church in Toronto, recently has made speeches attacking the Roman Catholic church.)

QUITE LOYAL

Mr. Rheaume said: "Catholics are quite as loyal to Canada as is the head of the Orange order.

"Dr. Shields said that the Roman Catholic church was a 'racket.' I say that he would do much better to employ his time recruiting than to heap criticism on the Catholic church.

"Our bishops have spoken and written strongly in aid of the war effort, and the Catholic church has done infinitely more to help the war effort than has Pastor Shields."

He scored all who "exploit anti-Catholic prejudices" in Ontario or elsewhere.

Mr. Rheaume said he was elected to the House of Commons in 1940 on a platform of no conscription for overseas service. He was certain if the plebiscite question had been "Are you in favor of compulsory military service for overseas?" Canada's answer would have been "no".

Joseph Jean (Lib, Montreal-Mercier) said he could not vote in favor of the bill.

"The only power this measure gives to parliament is the power to conscript men for military service overseas. I beg you; I beg the government to withdraw this law

BERTRAND SPEAKS

Government Defeat Would Result In Conscription Immediately Quebec Told

OTTAWA, June 19.—(CP)—Ernest Bertrand (Lib., Laurier) in the House of Commons last night warned his French-Canadian compatriots that defeat of the present government would bring the formation of a Union government "with conscription the first article in its program."

He asked: "If members from Quebec do not want immediate conscription why then open the only road that will pave the way for it."

Mr. Bertrand, one of the few Quebec Liberals supporting Prime Minister Mackenzie King's bill 80 which opens the way to conscription for service overseas by order-in-council, opposed the argument that conscription should be avoided under all circumstances.

ONLY SUPPORTER

He was one of a long list of French-Canadian members who spoke in the conscription debate last night and was the only one of them to support the bill. He spoke in English but most of the evening speeches by Quebec members were in French.

Douglas Abbott (Lib., Montreal-St. Antoine), a veteran of the First Great War, said he would object to conscripting men with volunteers even in Canada. He supported the bill although he would like to see Canada with a selective service system similar to that in the United States.

But an effort to impose such a system in Canada would "have disastrous results," he said.

Support for the bill was offered by Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity, North Battleford) because she felt it to be a step in the right direction. But she believed Canada was out of tune with the rest of the Allies."

Mrs. Nielsen said she wished Prime Minister Mackenzie King had voiced more strongly the Canadian people's desire to have a greater momentum in the war effort.

She said Prime Minister Winston Churchill had praised the aggressive spirit of British people calling for the opening of a second front.

"I can't help but feel we are out of tune with the rest of the Allies, that we are out of step."

WILL OF MAJORITY

At the opening of the night session, Douglas Abbott (Lib., Montreal-St. Antoine) said the majority of Canadians wished the government to be free of any past commitment and it should be free, if the necessity arose, to send men called for compulsory military training to duty anywhere in the world.

Mr. Abbott said he would vote for the bill to amend the National Resources Mobilization Act which would permit the government to impose conscription for overseas by order-in-council.

During the debate, Mrs. Nielsen said she would support any measures designed to bring about a total war effort.

"I am going to support the government amendment because I believe it is a step in the right direction although I am not satisfied it is going sufficiently far," said Mrs. Nielsen.

Canada could not afford to be shackled by the past. The French people had good reason to hate conscription, but only when imperialism was choking to death in a world of its own making did Hon P. J. A. Cardin, former minister of public works and transport, say he was leaving the cabinet. "Imperialists like Chamberlain" had been supported in the past, but a change had come.

This was not like the last war, and must be fought in new ways.

own boys volunteering for active service?"

Mr. Gray referred to "insidious propaganda" being used against Canada in the United States and said it would not be overcome unless Canada was ready to send fighting men wherever necessity arose.

2 Extreme Points Of View Are Easily Identified With Field Wide In Disagreement

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 19.—The conscription debate enters the second week with the outcome confused and uncertain. Two extreme points of view are easily identified. The Conservative opposition has proposed immediate conscription. A group of Quebec Liberals, whose numbers are as yet undisclosed, is opposed to conscription. The extremists on both sides, however, are cutting very little ice.

Between these two extremes the debate has exposed a surprisingly wide field of disagreement, differences in emphasis, fundamental conflicts in actual war policy. These are the developments which are making the debate historic in the sense that it may make or mar parties and governments and profoundly affect the course of this country in the war.

There is developing a hot, tense, explosive atmosphere on Parliament Hill—an atmosphere which discourages cool thinking and gives free rein to personal animosities and deep-rooted suspicions. An explosion, under these conditions, may be occasioned by trivial incidents arising out of a loosely-worded phrase or a misplaced semi-colon.

Excluding the two extremes which are of small importance, half a dozen members on each of which might spark the powder keg—are under way.

Should parliament be consulted when the time comes to impose conscription? Mr. King has said explicitly that there will not be two conscription debates and that the government in imposing conscription will act before there is a second reference to parliament. His words, however, do not exclude a return to parliament for a vote of confidence after the government has decided to impose conscription. There is an area in the King formula in which considerable manoeuvring can take place.

The ministers who have stood a second conscription debate plainly view this part of Mr. King's pronouncement with deep suspicion and it seems certain that a further statement of policy on the technique of applying conscription will have to be made. On that score, major trouble is a distinct possibility.

There is, so far in the debate, a noticeable difference in emphasis in the speeches of ministers. The weight of cabinet oratory, hitherto, has been against conscription. The speeches of Hon. James Gardiner, Hon. C. D. Howe, and Hon. J. T. Thorson proves plenty of evidence on this point.

It is equally notable that the pro-conscription ministers have not yet spoken.

In a real sense, the speeches so far indicate rather strongly that the cabinet is debating policy in the house of commons rather than in the cabinet room of the East block or outright conflicts as between the ministers have been screened by the language used, but not entirely successfully.

ACUTE DIFFERENCE

In this regard, particularly, there is growing evidence of an acute difference in viewpoint as to the use to which our remaining manpower shall be put. Mr. Howe for the first time in public has said clearly that war factories must not be stripped of men to meet the requirements of the eighth division army now authorized. Mr. Gardiner seemed equally convinced that the essential manpower requirements of agriculture must have priority over the army. Mr. Thorson stressed the growing shortage of military manpower. Plainly the country is running short of manpower and a decision on priorities must be made.

On the sheerly political side, the C.C.F. leader, Mr. Coldwell, viewing the troubled water with the keenest interest, has been casting vigorously, using various baits and apparently confident that big fish may be caught. Mr. Coldwell's performance has been impressive.

Obviously, Mr. Coldwell is endeavering to attract the Quebec anti-conscriptionists. Both C.C.F. amendments have been ruled out of order but both have attracted favorable attention from the Quebeckers. These amendments have followed the general line that there must be conscription of wealth and war industry simultaneously with conscription of manpower.

This line attracts Quebec for two reasons. The first is that Quebeckers believe that English-speaking conscriptionists will back away from conscription of wealth and war industry and therefore to couple the two together will kill both. The second is that French-Canada has always complained of economic discrimination and the Coldwell policy promises to remove it. The general feeling is that if Mr. Coldwell can win over a substantial section of Quebec Liberals, he will be on the high road to office.

Before the debate reaches the decisive stage there will be many more speeches, including a second one from Mr. King, and for this reason it is impossible to foresee developments.

Canadians In Alaska

Squadrons of the R.C.A.F. and Canadian anti-aircraft units which are helping in the defence of Alaska are not there just for appearance sake, to show the Japanese that Canada and the United States are allied in fact as well as in name. They are there because they are needed—as they would go wherever else they might be needed.

This should mean something to those who, in parliament and out, would set limits beyond which Canadian army units must not be sent unless they happen to be units specifically raised for service abroad. Six months ago it was a remote possibility that Canadian fliers and ack-ack units would be needed in Alaska. The possibility is no more fanciful that Canadian soldiers may be needed in future in theatres farther away than Alaska and in greater numbers than Active army units may be able to supply.

Should that situation arise, Canada's army should be as readily and as completely available as its air force and its navy now are, for service wherever sound strategy may make it advisable to send troops. On no other condition can Canada do its full duty to its Allies, or even be prepared to take all necessary measures to defend itself.

A Middle East Front?

In the three days during which he was allowed to tell his story of the battle off Sardinia, the Rome broadcaster stressed the point that the convoys under attack were the largest Britain had ever sent into the Mediterranean. There is no reason to suppose that part of the story was not true; it probably was.

The presence of United States airmen with the protective forces confirms the likelihood that the convoys were large ones and unusually important in the kind and amount of supplies and perhaps in the number of troops carried. Unless the fighting in Libya has shown Rommel to have sneaked across more men and equipment than had been supposed, so huge a supply fleet would hardly be sent just to reinforce and rearm the forces opposing him.

There is room to suspect the ships were carrying troops and equipment also for Egypt and the army with Auchinleck had been mustering in the hinterland of Asia Minor. It is to the point to note that United States planes have been bombing Black Sea ports from bases somewhere in that region. Vichy says they have been doing so for weeks.

Perhaps this heavy movement of transports into the Mediterranean is one step in the organization of a second front somewhere in the Middle East?

John M. Imrie

Edmonton has lost a public-spirited and very useful citizen through the death of Mr. John M. Imrie. For twenty years Mr. Imrie was Vice-President and Managing Director of the Edmonton Journal. For three years he has been in failing health, which compelled his retirement from active life a few months ago.

Mr. Imrie took a keen interest in the work of the Chamber of Commerce, and served a term as President of that organization. He was very widely known in the city and among businessmen throughout the province, and he held a foremost place in the ranks of Canadian newspapermen. Though not unexpected because his health condition was known, his passing will bring sharp regret to friends and acquaintances here and elsewhere, whose sympathy will be extended to the widow and her daughter.

First Things First

Employers in Canada—with a few occupations excepted—cannot in future dismiss employees or hire new ones without obtaining permission from the selective service officials. The aim is to "channel" labor into war industries and essential civilian services.

Not by compulsion, for the present, but by official direction and urging which it is hoped will get the same results—and will therefore probably amount to much the same thing. The employee who does not take the kind of work at which he is needed will hardly be surprised if the only job open to him is one he doesn't like.

What this amounts to is that the labor supply, like the supply of materials, is to be distributed according to "priorities". The production of munitions and the production of food are the twin-objectives to which industrial man-power—and woman-power—have to be directed. Without these things men cannot fight nor nations survive.

If hitherto a "job" has been only that, this appraisement is now obsolete. The question is no longer what anyone may prefer to do, but what he or she can do that will help to achieve the all-important ends of keeping—and increasing—the supplies of fighting "tools" and necessaries of life. The national objectives now take precedence over personal choices, whims and ambitions.

Should the milder directional method fail, no one need doubt that compulsory methods will follow shortly in shifting labor away from non-essential and minor occupations to these vital productive purposes. Our fighting men must have weapons and the nation and its Allies must be fed. Every other occupation is secondary to the supplying of these basic necessities.

It is officially stated that 100,000 persons, mostly Indians, fled from Burma before the advancing Japanese. The invaders had no particular reason to treat the Indians harshly. On the contrary, the "Asia for the Asiatics" doctrine would urge leniency toward them. Canadians may infer what sort of treatment they or their kinsfolk would get if the Japanese were to take control in any part of the Dominion.

"ATTEMPT TO STEAL THE LAND OFFICE"

Edmonton is usually a quiet place, a very quiet place. There are people who say that it is positively dull. On Saturday last it was, if possible, more quiet than usual—up to about three o'clock in the afternoon. After that hour and until late midnight it was undoubtedly the most lively, excited, exciting and generally interested place in all Canada, or its colonies in North or South Dakota or Washington.

There was the biggest kind of a circus on. There was more fun than could be furnished by a barrel of monkeys. Five hundred men with blood in their eyes were engaged in demonstrating that even in this dull town, in this peaceful country, physical force as a means of maintaining public right is not played out.

The occasion of the demonstration was the attempt on the part of the land agent to remove the land and timber offices to the south side of the river. To understand why there was such a sudden and unanimous outburst of public feeling it is necessary to understand the history of the affair.

On Thursday last, J. McD. Gordon, inspector of land agencies, arrived and gave notice to Mr. Anderson that he was authorized to remove his office to a box car, which had been leased from the railway company, pending the completion of an office then under construction, but the purpose of which was, until then, unknown.

Mr. Gordon left on Friday without his visit or its object being publicly known. Everything ran along smoothly until Saturday when Mr. Anderson ordered the dray company to send him a team to remove furniture. The teams went to his house about three o'clock in the afternoon, and he accompanied them to the land office, commencing at once to load the books.

"Saving" France

Nazi tactics still show that the Nazis respect French public opinion. They apparently realize there is a point beyond which the humiliation of France cannot be pushed with safety, even by a pseudo-French government. Both Admiral Darlan and Pierre Laval, chief of government, have made plain their view that France's future lies in a Europe dominated by Germany. Thus the only reason Hitler or they have for not forcing the French fleet to help defeat the enemies of the Nazi "new order" is that they are afraid this could not be done without incurring grave dangers to their control of France, and perhaps of the fleet itself. A France forced with commands by force, however, is a France in need of influence with Mussolini and Vichy's job in such a situation would be to explain that the only way to save French territory from the Fascists is to co-operate with the Nazis. The French people seem increasingly aware, however, that there is a way to save France from both.

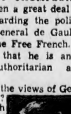
Charles De Gaulle, Visionary Democrat And Prophet

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

There has been a great deal of speculation regarding the political views of General de Gaulle, the leader of the Free French. It has been said that he is anti-democratic, authoritarian and even Fascist.

But what are the views of General de Gaulle?



Dorothy Thompson

The Free French leader comes from a conservative middle class family. His training was military. Neither his family nor career would incline him toward democracy. General de Gaulle, however, was little interested in politics. He was an intelligent soldier, a modern officer.

He realized that the second war of the twentieth century would not be the first. He foresaw the new war of movement based upon mechanized cavalry, armoured divisions. He regarded the reorganization of the French army as absolutely essential to the safety of France.

Therefore, as an officer and a patriot, and with no political prejudices whatsoever he began agitating for army reorganization. His first attempt was, naturally, with the General Staff.

But he found the General Staff impervious to new ideas, when its members were not actively hostile to them. They knew how the last war had been won, and therefore how any future war would be won. Into their sterility, furthermore, there entered a definite bias. A modern mechanized army was to them an army of engineers, mechanics, workers. It would require a different type of brain from that of the case-hardened military oligarchy. Many would be dislodged from their positions. Therefore, their interests were menaced — personal and social.

A modern mechanized army would require full collaboration from the leaders of the heavy industries. General de Gaulle went to them, also. But they did not like his ideas, either. They entailed the investment of otherwise "safe" money, and anyhow "there isn't going to be any war," and what they were really worried about was French radicalism. So General de Gaulle, patriot and conservative, got no aid from them.

Then he went to the parliament. It was like most popular bodies, containing some intelligent and incorruptible men, who put the welfare of the nation above everything. It also contained those who were merely the spokesmen for interests. Nevertheless there were those among them who fought for his ideas.

But parliaments consult "experts." The "experts" were the General Staff and, of course, the manufacturers.

Prophetic

The war itself proved General de Gaulle to have been prophetic and correct. Germany had a new army which was not even averse to taking ideas from the former enemies of Germany. The new German army read General de Gaulle with intelligence and approval. The geo-political scientist, Professor Haushofer followed with keen appreciation the geo-political arguments of the eminent British geographer, Sir Halford Mackinder, and proceeded to base a strategy on them. Thus the old saw about the prophet in his own country was again proved true.

De Gaulle, however, when continental France folded up, went to Britain with what he could salvage of French officers and soldiers, and proposed to maintain a continued French participation in the war. Whether he believed at the moment that France or Britain had a fighting chance is doubtful. He did however, propose to take a last stand for the honor of France and her loyalty to her allies.

But now what happened? He was, of course, denounced by the French General Staff and by the new authoritarian head of the state, who was a member of that staff. Marshal Petain announced that what had destroyed France was Liberty, Equality and Fraternity, and demanded sackcloth and ashes for the French people. The industrialists, almost to a man, joined the collaborationists, greedy to get in on the new German-controlled cartel system. Not five per cent of the men who supported de Gaulle were high rank officers. They were petty officers, soldiers, or civilians.

Resistance

But the resistance in France itself began to grow, as the first shock of defeat and occupation wore off. And from where did it come?

From the people. From middle class people, peasants, workers, students. It came in the Universities, among the intellectuals, and in the industries, among engineers and workers. It was a resistance without organization or without weapons—to start with. The French people had been free for decades. They did not understand underground movements. And because they did not understand them, they made fearful and costly mistakes, and many were imprisoned and executed. But the French people are extremely intelligent and they learned. When they lost one leader another arose to take his place—and this one was wiser by his predecessor's experience. Some aristocrats of France joined them, by whom there was great error than any personal interest. But the big business interests remained—ready to collaborate" with France's masters.

So this is the story of the education of General de Gaulle. He was a patriot, he was an officer, and he started as rather contemptuous of that amorphous thing called The People. He became a democrat because he was a patriot. He became a democrat because he saw where the soul and guts of the French nation is. Today he is not afraid of the French people. He knows that today they are his army. They, and not the small force he has been able to mobilize outside France. And they shall be sovereign in the new France to come, they and those of them whose names are unknown, but who are leading them today in underground groups—that is his program.

They Are Robbing Togo To Pay Matsuhari

By HAROLD L. WEIR

According to reports from Australia, the Japanese war lords are according very generous treatment to the Japanese industrialists. The loot of the entire Netherlands East Indies is being rapidly turned over to the great companies of Japan.

All the industries in the Indies, it is reported, are being given to Japanese firms. For instance, the General Motors factories there have been given to the Automobile Company. The Goodyear factory which had its own rubber plantations, has been handed over to a Japanese power concern.

Harold L. Weir

There is very good reason for this assistance being given to the Japanese war lords towards the Japanese industrial barons.

And the similarity is that the Japanese war lords and the Japanese industrial barons are one and the same.

Eighty Families

We have in our language a proverb which speaks of "robbing Peter to pay Paul".

This proverb deals with the folly of taking money out of one pocket merely to put into another.

Well, something of that sort is occurring today among the Japanese. For the war lords have seize occupied territory for the state. As industrialists, they find that territory is for themselves.

It is a nice little arrangement that satisfies everybody—everybody, that is, but the common people who don't count anyway. This also is what is going on for years. And the high-born Japs appear to be masters of the art of making profits pay.

For many centuries, Japan has been ruled by some eighty leading aristocratic families.

These families hold all the wealth of Japan. While the Mikado theoretically owns Japan, they very kindly hold it in trust for him and clip all the coupons.

They control all the banks, operate all the steamship lines, own all the factories, hold all the stock in practically every commercial concern and are landlords of practically all the arable land.

Every cultivated acre pays tribute to them. Not an industrial wheel turns without their consent.

Export Trade

The grip of these eighty families on Japan has been a criminally ruthless one.

A few years ago, when Japan was trying to compete in world markets with manufactured goods, the British Empire and America with all sorts of commodities at comparatively low prices.

Although most of these articles turned out to be utter junk, the world for awhile wondered why Japan was able to turn out this flood of goods at such a low cost. The answer was sweatshop methods.

When a Japanese firm was bidding on a contracting job, it took no account at all of labor costs. The Japanese workman was forced to work out was left after the lordly industrialist got his slice. The Japanese workman, in other words, got exactly the wage the industrialist was pleased to give him.

The workman had to accept these conditions because he knew that the eighty families, intermarried and closely connected by every possible tie, were quite well afford to close every factory in the country unless labor meekly did what it was told.

War Lords

But if the eighty families reign in industry, they also reign in politics.

Their members control the navy. They control the army. They control the public purse strings. They control the Emperor.

They are the war lords. They are Japan. They are the identical families which composed the Shogunate which usurped imperial functions throughout so many generations while the Emperors themselves were in the shade.

The Emperors were restored to puppet power, some years ago, because the war lords, the eighty families, felt that their hold on the country was slipping, because they needed some kind of a sentimental and religious "front" to mask their predatory operations.

So they brought back the Emperor from seclusion as a divine, infallible and not-to-be-questioned descendant of the Sun Goddess.

A Japanese might assassinate a war lord. No Japanese would even raise his eyes to the Emperor's face.

The Mikado, being completely in the capacious pockets of the war lords, supplies a magnificent screen for the most vicious racket ever perpetrated in the history of nations.

Banditry

The Japanese expedition of conquest has been called sheer banditry. No truer word was ever spoken.

Every move made by the Japanese armies and navy and air force is not calculated to enlarge the glory of Japan, but to line the pockets of the eighty families.

If these operations do enhance the glory of Japan, they also enhance the glory of the eighty families who are Japan.

If they add prestige to the reign of the Emperor, they add prestige to the eighty families who are inseparable from the Emperor.

The Japanese war of conquest is no more a legitimate national activity than is the war in China a war of liberation.

It is simply a raid by a closely organized gang of thugs on the Pacific area.

The eighty families are the war lords. They are the industrialists. They are the Emperor. They are Japan.

It is no wonder that they waste no time in pouring the swag into their own pockets.

Village Cricket, But Different

FROM THE LEEDS YORKSHIRE POST.

Dalsies prick with white, dandelions embroider with round heads golashes, the colour of the outfield. The pitch is a green silk ribbon, laundered by the roller's smoothing-iron and pinned down by five stumps. The pavilion has not had a lick of paint since the war started—or, indeed, for some years before.

The village cricket ground has not changed, though the crazy quilt of fields around it shows less of lev and pasture and more of the broken chocolate of land under corn than for many a long year. The players are those who absurdly truncated white coat; the short, tubby umpire the billowing immunity of a bell, velopes him as of old. But players and spectators have suffered a war change.

Two cars only have bumped their way along the rutted cart track, along which in times gone by two score would have jolted. The village children, quicksilver-active as the insects of a disturbed ant-hill, swarm around and over the fringes of the pitch; but there are few adults present, and those few either women or noticeably middle-aged men. At a quarter past three—the match was supposed to have started at three—the village captain goes round the field, appealing for volunteers to bring up the strength of the scratch eleven.

Schoolboy

A schoolboy with alacrity, and a ginger-haired plowman muttering that it's years sin' he clouted a ball, accept the invitation. The captain, a bit stiff in the joints like most of his team, is like them again, snatching a brief Sunday afternoon from other, grimmer duties.

When village cricket was waged between the owners with a bitterer intensity than characterized the wars of the Roses at Old Trafford or Lord's. Runs are fought for and sweated, and thought himself favored by the gods if he was called upon to bowl twice in a season at the tagend of foregone. matches. Today he goes in with the postman to open the innings and bowls unchanged from the brook end.

A near-by Service unit provides the formidable visiting team. Eight of the village eleven turn out in flannels; the schoolboy, the plowman, and the blacksmith, who ever exercised such mercurial cragfingers, know not this immaculate glory. The visitors, to a man wear khaki, and in pads, anachronistic seeming as Elizabethan ruffs, armor the uniformed knees of their opening pair as they stalk, at that dawdling pace consecrated to opening batsmen, to the wicket. Final as a minuet, the field is set. And as, unhurriedly and erratically as the village fast bowler opens the attack.

And a ghostly batsman plays to the bowling of a ghost,

He is a prisoner of war in Italy. Tom, who flailed his bat with the fury of a Jessop and the gay-go-lucky zest that was his own, was last heard of in Sumatra. Percy might have himself out today, but his Home Guard duties forbade it. As the Service pair begin to put on their bowling we think of Harry, whose deceptive medium-paced offbreaks lured many an overconfident batsman to play forward too soon . . . But the plane of which Harry was rear-gunner failed to return, a year ago, from a raid on the Ruhr.

"We kept it going last time," says old Bert, "and we'll keep it going this time (Well played!) He can't keep a length, Never could. Ah!" He wouldn't have put him if Tom were behind t'sticks. We've taken on more than we can chew this time. But I remember . . ."

The changing of the overs weaves its criss-crossing white pattern across the taut green of the field. Seventy-five for one. Diamond, the cow, cropping the new grass with languid greed, drifts like a grounded barrage balloon along the far hedge. Overhead the dragonfly drone of a squadron of lazily vibrates the stretched blue canvas of the May sky.

The village children practise, as they always have practised, alarming tricks of unarmed combat on the grass at the back of the paint-blistered pavilion. A small girl in a pink frock is solemnly weaving a daisy chain to crown her blonde curls.

And then, finding a devastating length, the ginger-haired plowman and erratically to the visitors for an additional 12 runs. Village cricket has still an unexpected twist up its rustic sleeve.

So Time Turns Back

SCIENCE MONITOR.

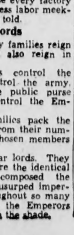
Once again has quiet settled down on rural New England. Almost like horse-and-buggy days, as sitting on the porch of country stores, New Englanders look up and down the silent street and say, "We might never have believed it." No longer the diversion of counting the number of cars per hour or enumerating the number of out-of-state licenses seen within the day.

Time has begun to be changing with it once again the peace and quiet of New England's village. Cattle crossing Berkshire highways with no urge of honking horns. An old horse jogging along in the middle of the road with sudden spirit of rejuvenated pride. An occasional lone car moving slowly without need of warning. "School ahead." The village store and post office take on new life as pedestrians browse in with market baskets on their arms.

Sunday once more a day of rest and gladness. With no roaring motors making the village quake, folk hear the church bells ring. Time to attend service. Time to enjoy a book long put aside for uninterrupted leisure. Time for watching the birds splashing in the bird bath. Time for rediscover selves and families.

"Sure," said a New England woman, walking for the first time in years from her house the short distance to the church, "we can't go places. But isn't the peace in the village street this morning really wonderful? Maybe gas rationing will do us good."

SIDE GLANCES - - - By Galbraith



"We can get married some evening after work—you don't want to interrupt our ship-a-day program now, do you?"

"Knights And Judges"

BEVERLEY BAXTER, M.P., IN MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE

LONDON—I spent an hour yesterday in the company of a remarkable man named Doctor Klinger, an Austrian-born Jewish financier who became a British subject many years ago, a man of vast interior possessions of a brain like a searchlight. For what they are worth let me give you in his own words his interpretation of events, his prophecy of things to come.

"The tragedy of Hitler," he said, "is that he understood the weaknesses of men and nations but not their strength. To him the British were a commercially minded people who remained rich because their Empire was so huge that even their bungling administration could not make it anything but a paying concern. He also knew that and no one could convince him to the contrary, that Britain held her colonies under a system of benevolent dictation. Thus he was certain that Britain's African possessions, as well as India, would rise up in a war to throw off the tyrant's yoke. He did not realize—and how many Englishmen realize it?—that British administration in India is the finest achievement of its kind in history. It has brought order and justice to a land where such things had no chance to grow. How could Hitler know that behind the easy-going surface character of Britain there is a race of knights and judges?"

Character

What power there is in a phrase! Writers and philosophers have been dissecting the British character for years and suddenly this little European flings out those penetrating, revealing words — "race of knights and judges."

A few minutes away from where we talked the Houses of Parliament were at work. A few minutes away the law courts were in session dispensing justice in a world that had almost forgotten the word. A few miles away in the skies young knights of the air were riding into battle against the enemy. And sitting before me, condensing all this into a phrase of six words, was a large-headed, quick-sized Jew with a mind like quicksilver and a vision that pierced the centuries.

"Hitler hated the Jews," he said, "because they had knowledge. He hated the British because they had character. He had neither and because of that he will bring Germany to ruin."

I asked him how the war would end. That is a question which might give any man pause but Doctor Klinger did not hesitate.

"Hitler will commit suicide, because he is not a coward," he said. "But he will not do that until he sees that government in Germany has ceased to exist.

"What will happen is this. The German army, held or beaten by Russia, will begin to fall back into Germany. The air force of Britain will bomb cities by day and night until normal life will become impossible and then the German people will take to the roads trying to escape. There will be complete chaos and anarchy with no government able to exert authority. Then Hitler will shoot himself and some stopgap government will be formed to sue for peace."

Again I asked him the question in all our minds, as to what would happen if Germany laid down its arms. Again the doctor had no doubts.

"Nothing," he said, "will be able to stop the greatest massacre that ever happened. I believe that before the reign of terror is over millions of Germans will be slaughtered by Poles, Czechs, Dutch and Norwegians. I am grieved but I see nothing to stop it. The Germans have only one hope and that is that the British Army will get there first to give them protection."

Forty Miles Per

ST. THOMAS TIMES-JOURNAL

A member of the Times-Journal staff motored to Toronto and back last week, rigidly observing the regulations as to speed and was surprised at the results.

He found that driving on the straightaway at 40 miles per hour and at 30 miles per hour in urban and other districts governed by this limit he averaged 35 miles an hour and was able to reach Toronto's down town section in a little over four hours, which is mighty "good going" for about 140 miles.

Of course, he was helped quite a bit by the light traffic. Whenever he was behind the wheel those 20 or 30-mile an hour drivers he had little or no trouble from oncoming cars or from passing slow car. Then there were two other factors that helped him take satisfactory relief in his slower driving—the saving in gasoline consumption and the wear and tear on the nerves. Driving at forty miles an hour is enjoyable, even over a long route, whereas the old rate of 50 and 60 was a nerve-wracker.

A nervous girl was chatting to her vicar about fishing, on which she was keen. "Did you manage to get any fishing while you were away?" inquired the vicar.

"Oh, yes," replied the girl, "quite a lot—mostly perch and chub, though they're not particularly nice to eat. Which do you prefer, vicar," she added, "cherch or pud?"

Delano Now At Prince George

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C., June 19 —(CP)—Frederick A. Delano, chairman of the United States National Resources Council Planning Board, arrived at this central interior city by train yesterday with a party of officials enroute to Alaska on a railway and roadbuilding survey.

Mr. Delano said the purpose of his trip is to investigate and submit reports on the possible routes for a proposed railway to Alaska and the coastal link with the Alaska highway now being pushed northward from Fort St. John, B.C.

United States army engineers have been in this district for two weeks and office has been opened here for the Trans-Canadian Alaska Railway survey location.

Major J. L. Charles, former supervising engineer for the United States army, also has come to this area to establish headquarters for a survey of the region.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is naturally warning and prompt treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from Merrick Drug Stores or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small pill, to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

First Fairview Homesteader Pays Visit To North Country

FAIRVIEW—First homesteader in the Fairview municipality, homesteading in the Friedenthal district a few miles east of Fairview, paid a visit here last week. He is Peter S. Gans of St. Albert, Alta.

The pioneer came into the district in the summer of 1910 before the land was completely surveyed. In the winter of 1910-11 it was announced in the Edmonton Bulletin that the land here was completely surveyed and thrown open for settlement. Mr. and Mrs. Gans left Edmonton that winter with an ox-drawn sleigh for the Fairview prairies. He filed at the Grouard land office on the western end of Lesser Slave Lake in February, 1911. His entry was the first recorded in the land office for the Municipality of Fairview.

THREE-DAY TRIP

It took the couple three days to travel from Grouard to Fairview, a distance of approximately 26 miles. Mr. Gans, who homesteaded once in Saskatchewan and twice in Alberta, liked the Fairview prairies with its flat level land sloping south 14 miles to the Peace river.

Today's War Moves

of driving east to Suez, which would make the Allied position in the entire Middle East precarious. Only the Persian Gulf route would be open to supplies, and its facilities already are taxed by the flow of material for Russia.

Rommel has amply demonstrated his ability in desert warfare and his tank equipment is admittedly superior to the British. The German 88 millimeter cannon, which the Allies so far have been unable to match, have blasted the British tanks from their path and driven Lieut.-Gen. Neil Ritchie's force back to a defensive stand along the Egyptian border and at Halfaya Pass.

BIG ASSET

In their rear they have left the valuable port of Tobruk, once again under siege. Its possession would be a big asset to the Germans as a base of supply. The British reportedly are resolved to defend it but will find it difficult because of the supply problem, which increased Axis air power has made much more hazardous than it was in last year's successful defense.

Unless the British achieve some quick miracle in the way of artillery and increased fire power of their tanks, their army seems soon to be massed air reinforcements.

Although the British are supposed to have air superiority in that area, except for occasional local deficiency, the balance appears to be definite. British fighter planes are conceded to be superior to the Axis but there appears to be a lack of bombers, particularly dive bombers.

Planes are not the most efficient weapons against tanks, but bombers properly used can work havoc with enemy troop concentrations and disrupt communication lines. In the field, the British do not appear to have made the most of their opportunities.

The arrival of American bombers is a most hopeful sign. In time, the balance can be strong and the United Nations will be in a position to block further German progress eastward. Much depends on whether Rommel will be obliged to halt and organize for a drive into Egypt, thus providing the necessary time.

Even if Rommel is unable to drive for Suez, the very threat of his operations presents a problem. If the British find it necessary to draw heavily on their troops in Syria and Iraq to provide for defense of Egypt, the way may be opened for an Axis drive by way of Crete, the Dodecanese Islands and Cyprus into Syria and the Middle East.

Young Trainees Disease Hazard C.M.A. Is Told

JASPER, June 19.—(CP)—Lt.-Col. A. C. Rankin, director of hygiene in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps said yesterday in a discussion on military medicine, a highlight of the Canadian Medical Association 73rd annual convention, that the calling up of young trainees of the reserve army for active service "introduces a hazard" because "this group is particularly susceptible to infectious disease."

Col. Rankin, former head of medicine at the University of Alberta, gave a review of infectious diseases in the army during 1941.

The hazard of bringing and calling up these young soldiers is being met by careful attention to early diagnosis, and the segregation of suspects and contact with systematic immunization measures," Col. Rankin said.

DANGER SLIGHT

With present efficient methods of prevention, the lieutenant-colonel added, there is very little danger of any serious outbreak of cerebro-spinal meningitis such as occurred in the last war.

Capt. O. Routrup, also of the R.C.A.M.C., who spoke on "Inspection and treatment of soldiers' feet" said it is essential to assess the ability of the feet of a recruit to stand strenuous training before selections of soldiers for active service.

"New recruits should be broken in gradually to prevent breaking down of their feet," he warned. "There are many acquired defects which render a man unfit for military duty. They permit useful service in a lower category. Flat feet is the most common of all defects of the feet."

Reasonable hygiene of the feet, he said, will prevent the development of many disabilities.

In regard to the medical selection of an air crew, Wing Cmdr. F. A. L. Mathewson of the Royal Canadian Air Force said the tests and the standards are not rigidly set for they are being modified all the time.

"As a result of experience and scientific investigation, a large number of dependable tests have been already evolved for the selection of men suitable for air crew, and it is from these recognized tests that men are chosen for the various posts in an air crew," he said.

Col. J. A. MacFarlane, consulting surgeon with the Canadian army overseas, described the convalescent camp overseas for injured soldiers and described the problems facing a surgeon overseas.

After the papers were received, discussion on medicine in military life began with Lieut.-Col. with Brig R. M. Gorsaline, director of general medical services for the R.C.A.M.C., taking part, and Air Vice-Marshal Wodore R. W. Ryan, head of medical services for the R.C.A.F., and Surgeon Captain A. McCallum of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Recent Addition To National Parks Proving Popular

The new Port Royal national historic park, at Lower Granville, Nova Scotia, attracted 9,738 visitors during 1941, reports the department of mines and resources. One of the most recent additions to Canada's system of national parks, the park contains the Port Royal Habitation which was officially opened on July 4, 1941.

The habitation was reconstructed as nearly as practicable as a replica of the trading and colonizing settlement which was built in 1605 under the leadership of Sieur de Monts, founder and first governor of Port Royal.

For two years it was the headquarters of Samuel de Champlain, famous explorer and chief geographer to King Henry IV of France. The habitation antedated the Pilgrim settlement at Jamestown by two years, and the founding of Quebec by Champlain by three years. It was destroyed by an attacking English force in 1613.

Supreme Soviet Votes Approval Of New Treaty

damaging Axis attacks on convoys destined for Murmansk and Archangel, Soviet Arctic ports.

He declared that although several Allied ships had been sunk en route to the Soviet Union, such attacks had not prevented increased deliveries.

Molotov revealed that the new agreement with the United States envisaged American aid amounting to $3,000,000,000.

The Supreme Soviet officially approved these resolutions:

1—To approve the government foreign policy.

2—To ratify the treaty between Russia and Britain on the alliance in the war against Hitlerite Germany and her associates in Europe and on collaboration and mutual assistance thereafter."

The treaty was signed in London May 26.

VICTORY FASTER

Molotov declared that the conversations in London and Washington strengthened the conviction that "victory over German imperialism will be considerably faster."

Among the main points in Molotov's speech were:

1—The agreements would govern both the wartime and post-war co-operation with no territorial expansion or interference in the internal affairs of other nations.

2—The Soviet Union holds no territorial ambitions either in Europe or Asia, "including Iran." The Russians have troops in northern Iran while Britain has soldiers in the southern sector of the country which is an allied stepping stone to the Russian front.) Russia also made no secret agreements with Britain or the United States.

3—American supplies will be "greater, some vastly greater."

4—The United States increased Soviet credit for payment of supplies from $1,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000.

5—"Complete unanimity of views" was reached at London and Washington for a second front in Europe in 1942 which would create "insurmountable difficulties for Germany."

Molotov's first public appearance of the war, received a three-minute ovation which was stopped when a host arose.

VOROSHILOV PRESENT

Standing behind Stalin, in full field uniform, was Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, hero of the Leningrad stand and now commander of Russia's far-eastern forces.

Andrei Zhanov, secretary of the Leningrad party committee, told the parliament that the people of Leningrad would work with "triple energy" against the Germans in response to the treaty. He told of Leningrad's resistance to the siege.

Molotov emphasized that the British pact governed both wartime and post-war co-operation and said the Soviet-British treaty and the Washington agreement were "destined to hasten the rout of Hitlerism and serve as the basis for post-war relations among the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States."

On the subject of getting supplies to Russia, Molotov said:

"German warships, German submarines and aircraft engaged in hindering the delivery of materials constantly attack vessels transporting armaments to the Soviet Union. In spite of the naval forces of our Allies escorting them, a number of vessels carrying cargoes for the U.S.S.R. have perished on the way to Murmansk and Archangel.

DELIVERIES HIGHER

"Nevertheless, far from having diminished deliveries of armaments and materials from the U.S.A. and Great Britain, they have increased in the past few months . . . We considered and still consider it necessary to take measures for the increase and improvement of these deliveries both at the present and in the future."

Molotov expressed personal thanks to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill for their "genial friendship."

"The people of all freedom-loving nations look upon the Soviet Union as a power able to free the world from the Hitlerite plague," Molotov said "They admire the battle we are putting up."

He said the results of his trip were "a recognition of our achievements . . . our strength is growing and our confidence in victory is greater than ever before."

Today's Sport Parade

By Jack Guenther

NEW YORK, June 19.—(BUP)—The comparatively new industry of professional tennis, which as a sport ranks somewhere near shuffle board, telegraphic chess and weight lifting, is about to commit the boldest bid for public recognition in its spotty 15-year history and this time the auditors believe a tidy profit may be in prospect.

Technically, the event opens a six-day stand within the sacred precincts of Forest Hills tomorrow and is ballyhooed as the 16th annual professional lawn tennis championships. Actually, it is just another of those clubby, clannish affairs in which one or two standouts are certain to haul away the $1,000 first prize—with a single exception.

That is, this season the sport has grown in stature for a rather simple reason. The amateur game has been all but salted away for the duration. At last count there were barely enough boys to fill the national singles bracket and they were more notable for their quantity than quality. Accordingly, people who like tennis must take the pro brand or do without.

"Cash and Carry" Right Name

THE professional variety has led a harrowing existence since C. C. Pyle proved that his nickname of "Cash and Carry" was no misnomer. It reached its greatest heights in the very first year. That was back in the early twenties when thousands paid to watch Suzanne Lenglen trip the light fantastic at $5 and $10 per head and went home satisfied.

Since then the pastime has enjoyed a number of ups and suffered through even more downs. At times it has thrived briefly on barn-storming tours. On more frequent occasions these tank town expeditions proved embarrassing. For instance, the boy genius of cafe society, Lex Thompson, dropped $25,000 on one during the winter. However, he did help build up the current tournament.

He did that by indirectly proving that Bobby Riggs, the cocky, two-time amateur king, was not particularly ill at east against the supposed giants of the game. So when activities open at 1 p.m., the 32 young, medium and old men of varied abilities will be out to stop Riggs and Don Budge. These gentlemen seem to have the first prize money in tow already.

Budge and Riggs For Final

HALF of the field will be cut down without undue delay and for the first half of the six days Riggs and Budge will go through the usual motions while priming themselves for a slam-bang duel in the finals. Then, on the sixth day, they will formally meet in what shapes up as the only really exciting match of the week. Either can win and win convincingly.

The two of them, with Frank Kovacs as an added starter, represent the real class of the tournament. Of course, there are Wayne Sabin, Bruce Barnes, Frank Hunter, and Berkeley Bell, but none of these has that special something which differentiates a good man from a very good man. They are the hacks of the trade. And the others, they'll merely fill out the bracket.

Vinnie Richards, who won the tournament four times, no longer is active. Bill Tilden, listed as missing for a week, turned up in Los Angeles but said he wasn't interested. Fred Perry retired in Mexico City two days ago and Ellsworth Vines is now engrossed in golf. Thus, the old guard which ruled the game for years will be conspicuously absent.

May Be Last Top Flight Event

THIS resolves the competition to Budge and Riggs. Don won the title two years ago and unquestionably is the most talented player in the world. However, he is notoriously lax in the matter of keeping in condition and takes on weight easily about the middle. If he is fit, he should win. If not, he will be given plenty of merry Hell by Brother Riggs.

Riggs was case-hardened during the lamented Thompson tour. Although a trifle small to be a great player, he is a shrewd tactician and has plenty of homely guts. The latter quality, while not often stressed in tennis, counts in a tough match. In a word, Riggs is still on the hungry side as professionals go while Budge hasn't much to inspire him to great deeds.

Tennis as a whole has been hit harder by the war than any other sport save boxing, and this 16th pro title extravaganza may afford the cash clients their last glimpse of top-flight competition. Even if Riggs or Budge should be side-tracked by some John Doe in the early rounds, there would still be the uncanny Mr. Kovacs and he alone is worth the price.

Mr. K. has finally convinced the experts that he is more adept in voicing threats and boasts during interviews than he is at the baseline or at the net, but still he is an engaging personality as tennis players go. Since even a cigar store Indian could exude charm when matched with the ordinary tennis man, this distinction is dubious at best.

Callura Beaten

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 19.—(CP) — Angelo Callura, 130, of Hamilton, Ont., lost a 10-round unanimous decision to Davie Crawford, 124, New York, in the main bout at the weekly boxing show at the Casino here last night.

It was a return engagement, the principals having fought to a draw at Providence, May 11.

U.S. Golfers In Canadian Open

TORONTO, June 19.—(CP)—Entries have been received already from six United States golfers for the annual 72-hole tournament for the Canadian Open Golf championship and the Seagram Gold Cup at Toronto's Mississauga Club Aug. 6, 7 and 8, it was announced here Thursday night.

In addition to Sam Parks and Julius Platt, both of the Pittsburgh district, and Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., three other Americans have sent in entries. They are: Frank Commisso, of Rochester; Jimmy Thomson, of Shaunee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Red Francis, another Pittsburgher.

Bill Dickey . . . backbone of Yankees.

Tall Catcher Wearing Well

Bill Dickey Good As Ever Despite 17 Years Of Baseball

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK, June 19.—William Malcolm Dickey is a remarkable baseball figure after 17 years at a wearing trade, but unlike Merv Shea, the Detroit coach, and other backstops, Bill Dickey does not call catching equipment tools of ignorance.

"If I had to do it all over again, I'd catch," says the tall man who so skillfully handles the Yankee pitchers.

"Catching is the most interesting position. The entire game is in front of you."

One of the most unusual things about Dickey is that he had stood up so well despite his odd stature for a receiver.

Five feet, 10 inches is considered the ideal height for a catcher. The catching squat should come easier to a player of that height.

The long-legged Dickey towers 6 feet 1½, yet looks as good as ever although he is crowding 35.

CATCHES 100 OR MORE GAMES FOR 13 CONSECUTIVE YEARS

Dickey is the only catcher in baseball history who has caught 100 or more games for 13 consecutive campaigns.

Dickey's longevity is traced to the fact that he is a typical Yankee liver, which means a clean liver. He tramps his legs off during the off-season hunting and fishing. He is a great lover of dogs.

Bill Dickey was the backbone of the Yankees even when they had Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig.

Pitchers have implicit faith in Dickey, who absorbed much baseball knowledge from the late Miller Huggins before adapting himself to the Joe McCarthy pattern.

Not a few rate Dickey the daddy of all catchers, although he lacks the speed of Roger Bresnahan, Wally Schang, Ray Schalk and Mickey Cochrane. He makes up for this shortcoming in other ways.

DICKEY PAYS ATTENTION TO BASEBALL DETAILS

Why wouldn't Dickey assert that if he had it to do all over again, he'd catch? That is the reply you would expect from a successful man.

Then, too, Dickey, could not play any other position, unless it would be first base. He lacks the speed to play the outfield, for example.

Dickey bogged down badly in 1940, but bounced back nicely last trip. He finished this spring's training season with a batting average of .466.

Turnesa, Crisman Shoot 65 To Lead Hale America Golf

CHICAGO, June 19.—(AP)—A little-known pro from Alabama and one of the seven golfing Turnesa brothers posted low scores of 65 Thursday in the opening round of the Hale America United States Open Golf tournament at the Ridgemoor Country Club.

Otey Crisman, of Salma, Ala., up here "gallivanting around," came in with the first 65 and for four happy hours gloried in his lead, which appeared to be safe.

But the firing wasn't over for long. Jim had overlooked little Mike Turnesa, of White Plains, N.Y., one of seven brothers. Mike, shooting a 34 on the first nine and a blistering 31 on the second, sneaked up to tie Crisman and thus the two led the field after 96 players—81 pros and 15 amateurs—had finished wrecking the course with sub-par golf. Eleven of the 107 entrants withdrew.

Forty-eight players ripped par to pieces and 15 equalled it. Par for the compact little 6,510-yard layout is 72, but that's for the club members and not for the golfing slickers who trampled over it Thursday.

Canada's two-man contingent was back in the ruck after the first day's heavy grind. Gordon Brydson, Toronto, carded 40-39 for a first-round total of 79. His fellow townsman, Bobby Gray, did better, 37-38—75, but still was 10 strokes off the pace set by the leaders.

Grouped two strokes behind Turnesa and Crisman were five players — Lawson Little of Monterey, Calif., 1940 national open champion; Al Brosch, Farmingdale, N.Y.; Lighthorse Harry Cooper, Minneapolis; Lloyd Mangrum, Monterey Park, Calif., and Mike Sipula, of Ottawa, Ill.

Another group of six were in the 66 bracket—they were Dick Metz, Oak Park, Ill.; Herman Barron, White Plains, N.Y.; Jimmy Demaret, Redord, Mich.; George Schneiter, veteran pro of Ogden, Utah; Wilford Wehrle, Racine, Wis., lowest shooter of the 15 smaleurs, and the veteran Horion Smith, Pinehurst, N.C.

The 40-year-old Capt. T. Jones, making his first competitive appearance in Chicago since 1928, reeled off a 70, two under par. The former grand slam champion was out in 35 one under, with birdies on the first and fifth and a bogie on the seventh, and had a 35 on the way home.

"It was as good as I had hoped to do," Jones said.

A large and lively gallery of 6,000 was grouped around the 18th when Jones finished, and gave him an ovation.

Craig Wood, of Mamaroneck, N.Y., the reigning United States open champion, was among those who equalled par with a 72.

Wagner's Second Autograph Helps Build Memorial

NEW YORK, June 19 — Thirty years ago Honus Wagner, then the No. 1 star of the National League, visited a little boy who was suffering in a hospital from infantile paralysis. The little boy's name was Jimmy McGill. The greatest all-around ball player of all time autographed a baseball for him.

The little boy recovered, grew up, became a professor at the University of Rochester, then president of the city's Board of Education. He passed away about a month ago, aged 42.

The friendship that started in 1912 between the famous Honus Wagner and the little boy in the hospital was a lasting one.

His autograph on a cheque has helped the fund being collected to immortalize Dr. McGill's useful life and public service as an educator.

Ontario Football Union To Operate With Three Teams

HAMILTON, June 19. — (CP) — Senior section of the Ontario Rugby Football Union will operate this autumn, representatives from Hamilton Wildcats, Kitchener Panthers and Toronto Oskwoods decided last night at a special meeting here as they drafted the schedule.

This year all league games will be played in October, with Hamilton meeting Kitchener in the opening game Oct. 3.

University of Western Ontario, London, asked each club if it would play exhibition games in London on off-Saturdays. While little discussion on this question took place, it was believed likely the Clubs would accept.

Secretary Harold Bailey, of Toronto, advised the meeting there was no basis for reports that the R.C.A.F. would have a senior club.

Following is the schedule:

Oct. 3—Hamilton at Kitchener.
Oct. 10—Toronto at Hamilton.
Thanksgiving day—Hamilton at Toronto.
Oct. 17—Toronto at Kitchener.
Oct. 24—Kitchener at Hamilton.
Nov. 7 and No. 14—The first two teams in the regular schedule to play home-and-home games, points to count, for the championship.

New Yale Coach Reputed To Have Football Mind

"A thorough student of football," asserts Dick Harlow of Harvard.

Odell is well grounded in fundamentals, is a good teacher and has always been associated with successful teams," explains George Munger of Pennsylvania.

It may also be called a modified Warner system, although the modifications have been so many that Pop himself would not recognize his brain child.

SCIENTIFIC COACH

Odell is a scientific coach. He believes that careful analysis of every play from moving pictures is more important than observations during a game.

Odell charts every play, offensive and defensive.

He discovers why plays do not go.

The day following a game Odell is buried deep in film.

He runs films back and forth, makes notes. This with the other coaches, so they all have a clear perspective of the success and failure of plays against certain types of defence.

During the off-season, Odell studies every play, keeps a chart in which he grades players individually. So much for effort, so much for ability to carry out assignments well, and so on down the line until he finds the 11 players who performed best during each game.

WORKS ALL YEAR

Like most successful coaches, Odell works all year around on football. If he is not looking at moving pictures he is plotting plays with other members of the staff, holding discussions with quarterbacks during the college term, holding discussions with other coaches about plays.

As a scout, Odell ranks with the best in the business.

He has a photographic eye that detects the slightest flaws in the defence and at the same time develops a defence that can thwart the striking power of the opposition.

With Howard Odell in command, Yale football is on the right track at last.

Army Orders Joe To Cavalry Camp

WASHINGTON, June 19.— (AP) — Prospects of another title fight by Cpl. Joe Louis Barrow faded into the indefinite future Thursday as the army decreed that the heavyweight champion must complete his basic military training forthwith.

War Secretary Henry Stimson announced that Louis had been ordered to a replacement training centre and added that, until his period of intensive soldiering there is completed, "Appearances other than those strictly in behalf of the armed forces will not be undertaken."

Normally basic training requires 13 weeks, but Louis is credited with having met some of the requirements since he was inducted into the army more than four months ago.

Stimson told a press conference inquiries that "presumably" the question whether Louis would be permitted to make a ring appearance in defence of his title—either for his own profit or for benefit of army relief funds—would be considered after he is finished with the next stage of his military career. He dismissed as "too iffy" a question whether Louis could fight when on leave from the army.

The many public appearances made by Louis since his induction have made it impossible for him to be accorded the same privileges of training that are available to other soldiers," Stimson said reading from a statement.

"That is unfair to him and to the army."

MAY CONTINUE EXHIBITION

Officials declined to enlarge on the secretary's statement, but there were hints of a firm intention to take the champion out of the limelight and accord him much the same treatment as his fellow soldiers.

Stimson's newly announced policy appeared to leave the way open for Louis to continue exhibitions he has been giving recently in army camps, but whether these appearances actually would continue was not stated.

A plea by Mike Jacobs, promoter of many of the champion's title bouts, that Louis be permitted to fight to raise funds for a $116,000 income tax payment due June 15 was ignored.

In New York's boxing circles, there was considerable speculation over the possibility, remote as it may be, that arrangements might be made for Louis to defend his championship in September.

JACOBS WILLING

Jacobs said he would be ready to promote a Louis fight any time the army gives the go-ahead signal but refused to venture an opinion as to when that might be.

"A war is a war," said Jacobs, "and I don't know just what I'll do. That's up to the army. I have a deal on with Bob Pastor to meet Joe but if Louis is permitted to fight this fall, I might try to get permission from the army to match Joe with Billy Conn again."

Conn also is in the army, stationed at Fort Jay in New York City.

In certain army circles, however, it was regarded as highly improbable that Louis would defend his championship again while the war is on. Admittedly, there might be more chance for a title match if the entire receipts were turned over to relief agencies—although even this was considered an outside possibility.

"ALRIGHT WITH ME," SAYS BROWN BOMBER

NEW YORK, June 19.— (AP) — Orders have been issued for the transfer of Cpl. Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champion, to Fort Riley, Kans., the army information office of the 2nd corps area said last night.

Louis left for his new assignment this morning.

Louis' transfer to Fort Riley, one of the army's leading cavalry training centres, probably was due, at least in part, to the fact that the champion has been interested in horses and their training. For several years he has exhibited a stable of show horses.

With his departure only 12 hours away, Louis said last night he had not been officially informed of his transfer.

"I haven't heard anything officially," said the champion. "But anything the army does is alright with me."

Fists Fly As Dodgers Trim St. Louis Cards 5-2

BROOKLYN, June 19.—(AP)—The Hatfields and the McCoys of the National league—Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals—fought with their fists again Thursday to no decision, but the Dodgers emergedfrom the riotous struggle with a 5-2 baseball victory.

They turned the trick with a three-run rally in the eighth inning, snapping a seven game winning streak for St. Louis and putting the Cardinals 5½ games behind the leaders.

This was the second anniversary of Joe Medwick's beaning by pitcher Bob Bowman, of the Cards, the incident which opened a nevercessing feud that has flared into the fighting between the clubs at intervals since.

It was Medwick who touched off the explosion last night. After walking to open the sixth he slid into second with spikes high. As soon as Medwick was waved out, shortstop Marion pounced on him and as they arose from the ground second baseman Frank Crespi rushed up and knocked Medwick down.

Players poured out of both dugouts and ran from their positions all over the field to mill and push for nearly 10 minutes before the umpires were able to clear them away.

Medwick and Crespi were banished from the game by the umpires, and outfielder Dixie Walker, of the Dodgers, had to withdraw because of an injury to his left leg, which he twisted during the rumpus.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

DETROIT, June 19.—(AP)—Detroit Tigers, who refuse to be awed by the Yankee reputation, stopped the American League leaders again Thursday, 3-1, as they combined two productive innings with the four-hit flinging of Virgil (Fire) Trucks.

The Tigers collected only six hits themselves off Spur Chandler, but they paid off on those blows. Pinky Higgins' two doubles were the biggest contributions to the Detroit scoring.

The victory was Trucks' fifth against two defeats and Detroit's sixth in 10 games with the Yanks this season.

Jest By Crerar Provokes Sharp Clash In House

OTTAWA, June 19—(CP)—Resources Minister Crerar provoked some sharp exchanges in the House of Commons yesterday when he humorously suggested isolation "on some comfortable island" for duration of the war, of the extreme leaders in the arguments for and against conscription.

He said some school of thought, represented by Liguori Lacombe (Con. Laval-Two Mountains) and J. S. Roy (Ind. Gaspe), opposed conscription for service overseas, and the other, which he did not identify demanded immediate unlimited conscription.

Mr. Crerar said both groups had taken a "serious responsibility" in raising the conscription issue in Canada.

CITES "QUISLINGS"

He spoke of disunity as a demoralizing influence on a nation's war effort and referred to the "Quislings" in Norway and the "untold millions" spent by Germany in promoting disunity in countries the Nazis sought to conquer.

"It is a sorry reflection that, with intentions which, let me concede, are the best in the world, we have in this country those who will do the job for Hitler for nothing."

Mr. Lacombe immediately demanded a withdrawal claiming that Mr. Crerar "has no right to compare me to Hitler," and adding: "I am as good a Canadian as the minister."

Speaker Glen ruled that Mr. Lacombe had not been compared to Hitler.

Mr. Crerar then proceeded: "Sometimes, if it could be done I think it would be an excellent thing if we could take the leaders, the sub-leaders and the sub-sub-leaders in these two camps and put them together on some comfortable island for the duration of the war."

"FREE COUNTRY?"

Conservative house leader Hanson asked: "Is this a free country any longer?"

Mr. Crerar continued: "I think the first I would nominate for that island would be the honorable member (ex Laval-Two Mountains (Mr. Lacombe)."

(Mr. Lacombe, long time Liberal member, recently left that party to form his own "Canadian" Party of which he is sole representative in the house).

Mr. Crerar added: "He (Mr. Lacombe) has announced that he is leader of the party and I think probably his desk mate (Mr. Roy) might be described as the tail of the party.

"I see the head and the tail but I do not see anybody between—it is a sort of disembodied party.

"Then, I think I would nominate my friend the honorable member for Parkdale (Dr. H. A. Bruce, Con.), as medical director-general of this island.

"I hesitate to say it because I would not want to send my honorable friend, the leader of the opposition to that island but if I were looking for a monitor who could caution, and advise, and at times chastise, I think I would select the leader of the opposition for that job."

Mr. Hanson retorted: "Thank heaven the minister has not the power to do anything. I do not know anybody in the government of this country more impotent than the honorable gentleman who is speaking. A complete washout if there ever was one."

Mr. Crerar said: "I am willing to be judged by the country. My friend should not get so touchy at a little banter because he hands out some himself."

He said there had been criticism from the opposition that the government had done too little and that it lacked leadership.

Dr. Bruce: "So it does."

Mr. Crerar: "And that the country lacked leadership."

Dr. Bruce: "You are a poor example of a leader."

Mr. Crerar asked his critics to review what the government had done in the years since Canada had been plunged into war for which it was quite unprepared.

Mr. Hanson: "Driven to it by public opinion."

Dr. Bruce: "Absolutely."

Youths Lost 4 Days Lived On Raw Partridge

NOMINIQUE, Que., June 19—(CP)—Kept alive by eating raw partridge and frogs legs since they disappeared into the bush four days ago, the Gregoire brothers were found yesterday by a searching posse.

The brothers, Marcel, 14, and Albini, 16, were found seven miles from their home near this Laurentian mountain town, in good condition although Albini had suffered from insufficient clothing.

Members of the search party said the younger boy had started into the woods in his night gown, and with his feet bare, after he had been punished for going swimming. The older boy followed him to cheer him up and finally decided to go along with him.

Epidemics Of Virus Origin More Frequent

JASPER, June 19. — (CP) — Epidemics caused by viruses are becoming more frequent and the commonest of these in Canada are poliomyelitis and encephalitis, it was disclosed at a round-table conference on recognition and treatment of poliomyelitis here today at the 73rd annual convention of the Canadian Medical Association.

Chairman of the discussion was Dr. J. D. Adamson of Winnipeg and other members were Dr. O. J. Day of Winnipeg and Dr. F. H. Mewburn of Edmonton.

It was reported that in recent years there has been an epidemic of poliomyelitis—infantile paralysis —somewhere in Canada almost every year and it was agreed the tendencies suggest epidemics due to the viruses, ultra-microscopic germs, are becoming more frequent.

BEST TREATMENT

The discussion brought out that at present when paralysis results from poliomyelitis, splinting plaster casts and surgical operations at rarely necessary but it now is being generally recognized that rest, heat and gentle movements will produce the best results in the end.

Characteristics of poliomyelitis, the discussion showed, were:

1—Epidemics occur late in summer and gradually wane as frosty weather sets in.

2—It is a disease of youth but is not actually "infantile." Practically all the cases occur before the age of 20 and most before 15. Average age in 1941 in Manitoba was 12.

3—The chief symptoms in most cases are headache, fever and stiffness of the neck or back. Presence of these in a child in summer should bring a suspicion of poliomyelitis.

4—Examination of the spinal fluid may confirm this suspicion.

5—A small proportion of those who become infected develop paralysis at some of their muscles. The number of these varies in different epidemics. In Manitoba in 1941 there were at least 1,000 cases and it is likely that 200 of these escaped without permanent disability.

6—Treatment during the acute stage consists of complete rest for a period not less than four weeks in any case, and, of course, much longer in those who show evidence of paralysis.

7—If paralysis supervenes (and it should be apparent by the fifth day), the treatment must then be directed to its recovery.

Battleships Hit Are Identified

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP)—Two Italian battleships damaged by United States heavy bombers in the Mediterranean on Monday were identified by the war department yesterday as the new 35,000-ton Littorio and the 25,000-ton Conte De Cavour.

In its first official report on the exploits of the big "Liberator" planes operating from North Africa, the department said in a communique that "a number of direct hits" were scored on the warships.

(Cairo dispatches said one was hit 20 times and the other 15.)

Toronto To View $100,000 Rotary Welcome Sign

TORONTO, June 19.—(CP)—The most valuable welcome sign ever made in Toronto—a $100,000 insignia studded with 1,287 diamonds—will be the city's show-piece during the Rotary International convention here June 21 to 25. It will be displayed in a downtown jewelry store window.

The diamonds range in value from $10 to $5,000. A tiny Rotary badge measuring less than one-quarter inch across was the model for the diamond-studded Rotary wheel which is mounted on a leaf.

Between 7,000 and 8,000 Rotarians from Canada, the United States and other countries are expected to attend the convention.

C.M.A. Informed On Problems Of Child Nutrition

JASPER, Alta., June 19.—(CP)—A paper on the essential features concerning the proper nutrition of the infant and child, prepared from data obtained by work in the department of paediatrics at the University of Toronto, was read today to delegates attending the annual convention of the Canadian Medical Association, by Dr. Alan Brown of Toronto.

Dr. Brown said the feeding problems with infants, "which formerly engaged so much of our attention, have now been largely solved by the feeding of proper concentrations of pasteurized or otherwise properly prepared cow's milk with the suitable addition of carbohydrate to cover the caloric needs."

DEFICIENCY DISEASES

He said the problem of the prevention of the so-called deficiency diseases, rickets, tetany and scurvy, "no longer engages our attention as it did some 15 years ago," because the "knowledge of the necessity for the routine administration of some form of vitamin D . . . is now widespread in Toronto that it is with the greatest of difficulty we obtain sufficient cases of rickets and scurvy for demonstration to our students.

"During the past hospital year out of 9,000 admissions and 73,437 attendances at the out patient department, we encountered 10 cases of rickets and nine cases of scurvy. Also, during 1940 we had 28 cases of tetany occurring in infants over one month of age."

He told of several investigations conducted by the department of the Toronto University.

Parry Sounders Planning Reunion

The 50th anniversary of the coming of more than 500 Parry Sound, Ont., settlers to Alberta, in 1882, will be celebrated by the holding of a picnic on Saturday, June 27 at Sandy Beach, Elk Island Park.

This large company of persons came out west under colonization rates. In 1881 T. G. Pearce and Joseph Rye had come to the Edmonton district to "spy out the land" and, finding that it afforded many advantages over the land they occupied in the East, they returned home and prepared to organize for the western move the following year.

There were three trains of settlers and chattels, all arriving at Strathcona (South Side) within about a week. The large majority located on homesteads at Agricola, Partridge Hills, Beaver Hills and at Star, now Lamont.

A few, including John Fluker and J. Rye, located a short distance north of Edmonton for more immediate conveniences. Mr. Fluker later moved to Beaver Hills. The general public is invited to the picnic at Elk Island on June 27, and all are asked to bring well-filled lunch baskets for the mid-day meal.

Orange Master Is Given Fifth Term

TORONTO, June 19.—(CP)—Lt.-Col. T. A. Kidd of Kingston yesterday was re-elected for a fifth term as Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America.

Col. Kidd told delegates that the Orange Order "re-affirms its resolution, adopted unanimously in Winnipeg before the war started, that should Great Britain be involved in armed conflict that Dominion's wealth, industry and manpower be conscripted."

"We as a nation want to walk step by step with the United States," Col. Kidd added. "Conscription has produced an army for them to send to Ireland and England while our government calls for volunteers only. It is a thoroughly disgraceful situation and must react upon our national influence in the future."

W. J. Gilmer of Winnipeg was elected Grand Marshal, and R. J. Edgar of Calgary, Grand Auditor. John Easton of Winnipeg was elected Councillor.

NEWTON'S DISCOVERIES

Newton discovered the composition of light, and the differential calculus, a method of computation.

Rickey Lets Other Club Find Out If Player Slipping

TAMPA, June 19.—When Dizzy Dean first cracked the headlines and was rated nothing more than an incredible kick, the one-time cotton-picker didn't know how much thought he put into pitching.

"Oh, they tell me this about one hitter and that about another," replied Ol' Diz, "but they all look alike to me. I just rear back and pump that thing through there with something on it.

"That puts the problem up to the hitter."

Branch Rickey had the same idea in selling ball players long before he peddled Dean and his lame arm to the Chicago Cubs for $185,000 and three useful hands, one of them Curt Davis, who opened the 1941 world series for the Brooklyns.

USUALLY KNOWS

There isn't a truer baseball saying than "They never die on the Cardinals."

Rickey usually knows, of course, but when he is not positive his sound theory is never to wait to be certain about a high-salaried Red Bird has had an off-year or is on the way down.

Unless they're indispensable and in full stride—and especially when they are susceptible to injury—the Rickey system is to sell 'em while there's a market.

No other appraiser of ivory can find so many things wrong with an athlete, exclusive of playing pallots. Like Ed Barrow of the Yankees, Rickey is a stickler for conduct off the field, too. Next to Yankees, Cardinals meet the stiffest personal requirements.

But the main point is that Rickey gets somebody else to find out whether a Cardinal is slipping.

$50,000 FOR MIZE

Which brings us around to Johnny Mize, who followed in the Rickey sales pattern by bobbing up with a bum throwing shoulder, but appears to be alright now.

Rickey does know that Mize has to smack a long ball to be much help.

It is probably true B. R. doesn't know whether Mize's reduction in home run power, from 43 to 17, was just one of those things in the life of a ball player or the beginning of the end.

So Branch Rickey took the $50,000 and let the New York Giants worry about Johnny Mize being all in one piece and hitting the ball for magnificent distances.

They never die on the St. Louis Cardinals.

Two Schools For Officers Expanded

OTTAWA, June 19—(CP)—The Canadian army's two big officers' training schools at Brockville, Ont., and Gordon Head, B.C., are in process of expansion.

The need of the growing army for more well-trained junior officers and the decision to transfer to Canada the officers' training school which formerly operated in England are responsible for the expansion.

Work on the plant at Montreal this week Defence Minister Ralston said the present capacity of the two schools is 1,600 and this is to be expanded to 3,000.

As the normal officer's course is three months, this will mean a monthly turnout of trained officers of about 1,000, after allowing for failures and the fact that officers for some special branches of the service, like ordnance, medical, dental and army service corps men, remain in the schools for shorter periods.

Former Adviser Of Chamberlain To Retire Soon

LONDON, June 19—(CP)—Sir Horace Wilson, from whom the late Neville Chamberlain drew much of the inspiration for his appeasement policy, will retire in August, when he reaches the age of 60.

He will place as head of the British civil service and permanent secretary to the treasury will be taken by Sir Richard Hopkinson now second secretary to the treasury.

Sir Horace leaves a public picture in which he scarcely ever appeared.

Yet Chamberlain, in the years that led up to Munich, listened more carefully to him than to any representative of the British foreign office, and there were many observers who believed that Sir Horace was the one man who sold the prime minister on appeasement.

EXTERMINATOR TO PIRATE

The work of capturing ships for the British government as a pirate exterminator was too much of a temptation for Captain Kidd, so he, himself, became the world's number one pirate.

Canada has five sugar beet processing plants located in Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario and a sixth is being built in Quebec.

No Such Thing As Nerves In Golf Says Byron Nelson

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK, June 19.—In the P. G. A. tournament at Seaview, Harry Cooper had a Negro caddy named Nelson Johnson and in his tense quarter-final with Byron Nelson, Cooper became upset at some mistake he believed the caddy had made.

"Nelson," he exploded, crossing the road for the 37th and first extra hole, "you are a lunkhead and no good fool."

Byron Nelson was walking along side of Cooper, and the outburst even jarred the golfing automaton.

"Were you talking to me, Harry?" he asked, puzzled at the show of temper and entire lack of decorum.

Nelson and Jimmy Demaret agree that there is no such thing as nerves in golf.

"If there were any pressure on me when I missed the two-foot putt which enabled Corp. Jimmy Turnesa to pull up even at the 36th, I wasn't aware of it in the slightest," explains Lord Byron of the iron pulse.

"When my drive went out of bounds on the 37th hole, I was trying to keep the ball to the right. It hit a tree and bounded out. The ball might have, ricochetted the other way, giving me a clear shot to the green.

"You either do or you don't in this game. Of course, the element of luck is there, but you'll get the breaks in the long run if you keep hitting your shots correctly."

Against Sam Snead, Demaret played as well as ever did, but putts simply wouldn't fall for him.

Nelson calls Corporal Turnesa the finest putter he ever saw. Like Willie Turnesa the year he bagged the National Amateur, the sixth of seven brothers also excelled at getting out of trouble. While he appeared to be the most nervous player in the tournament, the lad from the Medical Corps was the steadiest.

A little fellow—he weighs no more than 140 pounds—Corporal Turnesa is built from the waist up.

Baker's Club Poison To Champs

Detroit Tigers Still Able To Knock Over N.Y. Yankees

DETROIT, June 19. — (AP) — Ability to defeat New York Yankees paid off Detroit Tigers in the form of the 1940 American league pennant, and dividends are still coming in to keep Manager Del Baker's club out of the second division.

Of the first 16 defeats suffered by the world champion Yankees this season, the Tigers administered six or one more than half of the combined total of the other six clubs.

This makes it plain that equivalent successes by the others would reduce the Yankee lead by many furlongs and restore league pennant affairs to what might truly be called a race.

In the 1940 pennant race, the Tigers that year beat the Bronx Bombers 14 of 22 games, while Cleveland Indians won 10 and lost 12. Detroit seized the flag from the Indians by a single game.

Last year the Tigers divided 22 games with the Yankees, while the champions beat Cleveland 13 times, and Detroit barely squeezed into a tie for fourth place with the Indians.

There's no apparent reason for Detroit's role of Yankee beater except perhaps that manager Baker is the most outspoken of league pilots against what he described as an attitude of defeatism toward the coming Yankees. He reportedly has talked the Tigers out of the jitters against the champions, but the lowly Washington Senators and Philadelphia Athletics come along to whip the Detroiters.

As terrifying as the Yankees may be to others, Detroit's main concern lies in the draft situation on its own club. George (Birdie) Tebbetts, one of the League's ablest catchers, has announced he will be in the army by July 9. Lefty Al Newhouser, promising young pitcher, has passed his draft physical examination, and shortstops Billy Hitchcock and Murray Franklin are subject to immediate call.

Tories Planning Party Policies

REGINA, June 19.—(CP)—The Conservative party in Saskatchewan should "look ahead, not back," J. H. Diefenbaker of Prince Albert yesterday told the provincial convention of the Saskatchewan Conservative Association.

Mr. Diefenbaker, Conservative M.P. for Lake Centre, confirmed his resignation as provincial leader of the party. Election of a new leader is being considered by the convention, with 100 delegates in attendance.

Because the convention is considering the new platform and policy of the party, Mr. Diefenbaker suggested that when this was drawn up it be in keeping with present conditions. Important in the new aims, he said, would be the Conservative policy of immigration that would open Canada's doors to British people after the war.

Both federal and provincial sections of the party would do well to adopt as their policy basis, the principles laid down in the Atlantic Charter, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

BRUCE HUTCHISON DECLARES:

United States Now In World Affairs Permanently

Fundamental Decision Of U.S. On Step Made Clear Asserts Canadian Writer

This is the last of a series by Mr. Hutchison from Washington.—EDITOR.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON
Vancouver Sun Political Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 19.—The first and fundamental fact which emerges from the furious spectacle of Washington is very simple. It is, of course, that the United States, for the first time, is giving itself to the world. Against the advice of Washington's Farewell Address, in reversal of a policy which prevailed, unbroken, since then, in repudiation of the fatal League decision of 1920, the United States has made up its mind to throw its unequalled weight into the general struggle of humanity, during the war and after the war.

Perhaps this is the most important and the most hopeful thing that has happened to the human family in modern times.

The government and congress of the United States are acting now on the assumption that this decision is final and irrevocable; are acting, in fact on the belief that it is unavoidable. There is idealism in it, but something much more solid to build on—the realization of the American people that they can no longer remain out of the world even if they want to.

POLICING THE PEACE

As the series of reports has tried to show, the over-all decision is at once political, military and economic.

Politically, the United States already has made its alliance with the British commonwealth and, in a somewhat less intimate fashion, with the other United Nations. Formally, the United States government is committed to a system of world collective security under some form of league.

Militarily, the United States has underwritten all the democracies, vastly extended its military power, established bases from Newfoundland to the Near East, and certainly intends, with the other United Nations, to police the enforcement of the next peace.

Economically, the United States has agreed to loan an almost incredible amount of war materials to its friends without detailed assurance of repayment; is prepared to continue loaning after the war; and is working to restore a free movement of trade throughout the world, the very negation of the self-containment policy which began with Henry Clay and the American system of tariffs.

PUBLIC SUPPORT

Here is a foundation on which a tolerable post-war world can be built. It is a foundation which never existed before. While it would be folly not to realize that the best of plans can be upset by the accidents and conspiracies of politics, it is obvious to anyone who saw the election of 1920, as this reporter did, and sees Washington today, that the position of President Roosevelt is entirely different from the position of President Wilson.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his determined internationalism, has this incalculable advantage — the American people have seen twice in a single generation that they cannot keep out of the war. It is a fact which they did not know in 1920.

That the United States officially is laying all its plans on the assumption of full participation in the world's affairs, in the belief that a new world order will emerge from the war, is important enough in itself. Happily today there is more than the official view of Washington. There is a well-stated public opinion which supports the official view.

In the first place, all public opinion polls show that the president has the overwhelming confidence of the people. A recent study by Fortune, whose poll has proved extraordinarily reliable, shows over 60 percent of the American people anxious for their country to organize the world permanently for peace; 50 percent believing that the United States, with the other democracies, must take on the job of policing the post-war world, as against only 37.6 percent opposing this policy; 42.1 percent favoring free trade with the British commonwealth as against 35.3 percent opposing it, and 62.1 percent favoring free trade with Canada.

Such figures were unthinkable at any time in American history before this war. They were unthinkable before Pearl Harbor. They represent a new epoch in the life of the nation and, given sound leadership in Washington, they should guarantee a new epoch in the world.

Yet the dangers inherent in the revolution of Washington are not ignored here. Isolationism has gone underground, but it will emerge again after the war, and it can emerge in the form of a new American imperialism. This, says, is to succeed, would be the most bitter paradox of all, since the United States is fighting this war against imperialism, and has said through Mr. Sumner Wells that imperialism is dead, and is bitterly critical of British imperialism.

This danger must be watched but there is certainly nothing in the government's policy, nothing in the public acts of Congress and nothing visible to the public opinion polls to show that the isolationists have any wide support either for isolation now or international domination later.

In domestic politics, as in foreign affairs, the United States appears to be committed to a permanent decision of almost revolutionary implications. For better or for worse, the government is underwritten national prosperity, and will spend the money necessary to maintain it after the war.

This domestic decision merges into the foreign policy of the nation, for it is the accepted theory of the Roosevelt government that only if United States prosperity is maintained at a high level can there be any hope of reducing tariffs, moving goods through the world. If prosperity collapses after the war it will be useless to ask Congress to allow the importation of foreign goods in the quantities necessary to restore world trade. In plainest terms, the basic decision of this country is to prevent a post-war slump at all costs.

But it must never be forgotten that the United States, no matter how drastic its economic experiments may be, is determined to maintain private initiative as the underlying fact of the economic system, as the climax of American society. The final report of the temporary national economic committee, the over-all economic investigating committee of the nation, said: "The objective of government should be to foster and stimulate free enterprise rather than to supersede it." This view was accepted by the President when he urged a program "to preserve private enterprise for profit."

In fact, all basic policies of the United States — world trade, world security, fullest co-operation among the democracies, policing of the aggressor nations, prosperity at home—aim at a maximum freedom for the individual man.

Destroyer, Four Trawlers Sunk, Six Attacking Nazi Planes Downed In Wild Sea, Air Melee

LONDON, June 19.—(CP)—A wild sea and air melee 100 miles off the French Atlantic coast on Wednesday which resulted in the destruction of four Spanish fishing trawlers, the 1,120-ton British destroyer Wild Swan, and half of an attacking force of 12 German dive bombers, was disclosed today by the British Admiralty.

Chronologically, this was what happened, the Admiralty communique said:

1. A dozen Junkers-88's roared in on the 23-year-old destroyer Wednesday evening and "also turned their attention to a Spanish trawler fleet which was fishing in the vicinity."

2. Three of the little Spanish vessels were sunk, and a fourth was damaged.

3. The Wild Swan shot down four of the 12 bombers, and two others, which probably were winged by the destroyer's guns, collided and crashed into the sea.

4. The Wild Swan, herself damaged, collided accidentally with the damaged Spanish trawler, sending the fishing boat under.

5. The Wild Swan subsequently sank.

Eleven members of the trawler crew and the bulk of the Wild Swan's complement were saved.

No names of those aboard were given out, but it was believed certain that among the passengers were Kichisaburo Nomura, and Saburo Kurusu, Japanese emissaries who were still negotiating with State Secretary Cordell Hull when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7.

House Warned On Gravity Of Nippon Threat

Japanese was "for us to take offensive action against Japan."

This should be done with the consent of Russia to use Siberian airports if action was taken before Japan attacked Siberia, or directly if Russia would not consent to using Siberian bases, he said.

Mr. Turgeon recalled that he had previously urged the creation of a ministry for war and the establishment of forces in the Yukon area in readiness for an offensive against Japan.

Mr. Turgeon, a French-Canadian who has long resided in Alberta and British Columbia, supported the government but declared no person would deny the right of the minority to fight the measure until it had become an accomplished fact.

ACCEPT ALL MEASURES

Mr. Turgeon said when the government was obliged with powers it ought to have, he intended to accept every measure of compulsion the government might deem necessary to impose because of the war, including compulsion respecting wealth and finance.

It had been known Germany and Russia would get into death grips, and the Arctic regions loomed as a new front. While preparations for these northern battles were taking place Japan had taken possession of part of the Aleutians. The best description of Alaska had been written by a German who was one of the military advisers of Hitler.

EXPECTS ATTACK

Mr. Turgeon said he expected Japan to attack Russia and if the airfields were taken, Alaska, the Yukon, British Columbia, and Northern Alberta were "at the mercy of the Japanese."

The line of Canadian airports leading to Alaska must be used as a line of offence.

The only way of saving northern Canada was through offensive action. If Russia would consent, after it became embroiled with Japan, then Canadian troops should go to Siberia to fight. Unfortunately, the Japanese had moved first to take the Aleutian territory they held.

Japan could possibly encircle Alaska.

Mr. Turgeon urged appointment of a minister of war.

The manpower plebiscite at best was only an indication to parliament of what the people wanted, he said.

OTTAWA, June 19 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King said yesterday in the House of Commons that conscription would not have been imposed immediately if Quebec had voted "yes" instead of "no" in the April 27 manpower plebiscite.

J. G. Turgeon (Lib., Cariboo), during his address in the conscription debate, referred to an editorial in Wednesday's Ottawa Journal which said: "Does anybody imagine that if Quebec had voted 'yes' in the recent plebiscite we wouldn't have conscription now?"

"We certainly would not," Mr. King interjected.

"The Prime Minister says we certainly would not, and I agree with him," said Mr. Turgeon.

10,000-Ton Steel Freighter Built In 77-Day Period

A WEST COAST CANADIAN PORT, June 19.—(CP)—A west coast shipyard yesterday claimed another Canadian record in steel freighter construction in the 10,000-ton Fort Pitt, launched Wednesday night, 77 days after her keel was laid. The previous production record for a similar type of ship built in Canada was set by the same shipyard last month when a freighter was launched 80 days after the laying of her keel. In both cases much of the fitting-out work was completed.

Shipping Losses Causing Alarm

MELBOURNE, June 19.—(CP)—Prime Minister John Curtin told the Australian Council of Trades Unions today that heavy shipping losses are causing grave alarm among the Allies and imposed on Australia a great obligation to increase war production.

He spoke to the council, the governing body of the commonwealth's labor movement, at opening of the sessions to be devoted to a three-point agenda:

1. Rationalization of industry to concentrate manpower and woman-power on the war effort.

2. Large-scale employment of women to release men from civilian industries for war service and war industries.

3. Establishment of an economic planning and co-ordinating committee to allocate manpower.

Mr. Curtin appealed to the council for assistance in the immediate transfer of more than 300,000 men and women to war industries.

Assassins Of Heydrich Are Claimed Shot

LONDON, June 19.—(AP)—Two men accused as the assassins of Reinhard Heydrich, No. 1 Gestapo executioner known to millions in occupied Europe as "The Hangman" were found in a Prague church yesterday morning and "shot while resisting arrest," the Prague radio claimed last night.

The assertion came two hours after the expiration of a German ultimatum to the Czechs to deliver up the assassins of Heydrich or take the consequences.

The British Broadcasting Corporation told the Czechs in a broadcast from London last night that the Nazis had "decided to discover" the assailants of Heydrich after realizing possibly momentous decisions would be announced.

Informants emphasized that Churchill was accompanied by no civilian of first rank but that he took with him Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Imperial General Staff, and Maj. Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, deputy military secretary to the war cabinet and Churchill's ministry or defence chief of staff.

"The President and Mr. Churchill probably will examine the whole world situation, study reports of their production experts and make certain that they are in complete agreement on broad strategical policies," a responsible informant said.

"MUST MAKE DECISION"

"Apparently recent conferences of British and American military and production chiefs have reached the stage where the two chiefs must make a final decision. Thus they decided that this was the best time to review the Allied position and reaffirm agreements which obviously formed the basis for recent talks here and in Washington."

Asked whether Churchill went to Washington because of the plainly increasing anxiety here over the situation in Libya and continued loss of Allied shipping, the informant said:

"Remember we want an active second front in Europe in addition to the active front in the Middle East, not instead of it."

He denied that Churchill had gone to Washington to discuss the situation created by Axis successes in the Mediterranean. Churchill decided some time ago to visit the President, the informant said.

DEPARTURE SECRET

The Prime Minister had fixed no date for his visit until the last moment, and thus was able to ensure secrecy. Only a few cabinet ministers and high military officers knew he intended to go until it was announced here at 2:31 a.m. (6:31 p.m. Thursday M.W.T.) that he had arrived.

Churchill's absence from the House of Commons yesterday and Wednesday caused no speculation.

Churchill's visit was linked not only to the visits of American service officers here, but to the visits to Washington of Lord Louis Mountbatten, chief of the British commando forces, and Oliver Lyttleton, production minister in the war cabinet.

It was mentioned that in creating any second front the question of adequate shipping is vital.

There was general hope in political quarters that Churchill would be able to disclose something when he returned here in a Commons speech or in an Empire broadcast.

R.A.F. Planes Bomb Railway In France

Grave Setbacks To Allies Now Causing Concern

By NED RUSSELL

LONDON, June 19.—(BUP)—Britons, gravely anxious over news that the British army in Libya had been forced back to the Egyptian frontier, looked toward Washington today in the hope that talks between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill would provide a surely needed second front.

"Second front talk in the United States: Plotting turning point in war" was a typical headline in the afternoon newspapers which informed the British public that Churchill, who only three days ago saw King George at Buckingham Palace, was at the White House.

Anxiety was increasing not only over the military situation in Libya but the position in the Mediterranean generally because of the admiralty's silence regarding the air-naval battle of last week-end. The problem of shipping, vital to the opening of any second front, was regarded with grave concern.

SERIOUS DILEMMAS

The Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, who has led the demand for an immediate second front in western Europe, said editorially:

"Churchill arrived at Washington at one of the supreme hours of the war. No one disguises the fact that a sudden series of new dilemmas and setbacks confronts the Allies . . . The news from Russia is also serious . . . All other issues, grave as they are, may be subordinated by the opportunity of opening a new front which could face the Axis with greater dilemmas than even those which obsess us."

Responsible quarters said that the President and Churchill, in what was expected to be their most secret conference of the war, would discuss strategic problems incident to "approaching developments."

Feeling was strong here that these developments concerned a second front and that the President and the British premier would be in position, as the result of their talks in Washington, to take lightning decisions on matters of great moment.

LITTLE NEWS LIKELY

It was understood here that there would be no really informative statement on the talks until after Churchill had returned to London and it was said that there was little chance that any of a series of that their threats of heavy reprisals were in vain.

The British broadcast emphasized that the Berlin claim was issued "two hours after expiration of the ultimatum to the Czechs.

"Embittered and frightened by Czech resistance, the Nazi authorities let themselves indulge in vain and useless threats," the announcer said. "There can be no doubt that the Czech nation has conquered in this fight against the Nazi oppressors."

Board Ready Purchase All Export Cattle

OTTAWA, June 19.—(CP)—The wartime prices and trade board is prepared to purchase all cattle which would normally be exported to relieve the present beef shortage in Canada, Donald Gordon, Wartime Prices and Trade Board chairman, said in a statement today.

Despite this action the supply could not be expected to catch up to the demand before mid-July, Mr. Gordon said. He gave full assurance that there was no danger of any food shortage in Canada and a wide variety of foods remain available to give Canadians a well balanced diet.

An order now is being prepared to define maximum prices of individual cuts sold to retail butchers, he announced.

COMPLETING DETAILS

The board's action in purchasing what would normally be export beef would be taken through the recently formed Wartime Food Corporation Ltd., Mr. Gordon said in his 1,000-word statement.

"Detailed plans for the operation of this corporation are practically completed and it will undoubtedly be operating in the market by July 1 when the next quarterly export quota for shipments to the United States becomes available."

The board chairman appealed to Canadians to assist by reducing to a minimum their consumption of beef and beef products in the warm summer months.

"While the temporary short supply of beef cannot be corrected immediately the board is taking action to deal effectively with beef price problems," he said. "Shortages of supply and the eagerness of retailers themselves to obtain meat for sale make it difficult for the board to assure that normal spreads between different qualities of beef are maintained."

SEEK TO DEFINE GRADES

Retailers were asserting that despite the recent order defining maximum wholesale prices by zones there was a tendency for all qualities of beef in each price class to be sold at or near the maximum.

In addition to preparing an order defining the maximum price for individual cuts sold to local butchers efforts are being made to define more precisely quality and to establish price differentials between them, Mr. Gordon reported.

LONDON, June 19.—(CP)—The war office announced today the posthumous award of the Victoria Cross to Lt.-Col. Geoffrey Keyes leader of the commando detachment which broke into Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's headquarters in Libya in a swift raid last November.

He was the son of Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, one of the organizers and first commander of the commandos.

Navy League Does Fine Work

There is no greater enemy of morale than the biting cold of the north Atlantic, and in this picture is shown the terrible cold that the men of the Merchant Marine are subjected to as they "go down to the sea in ships" to bring food and munitions to the fighting services of the United Nations. An opportunity is being afforded residents of Edmonton and district to help combat this enemy through their contributions Saturday to the Merchant Marine tag day being held under the auspices of the Navy League of Canada to collect funds to supply socks, sweaters and warm coats to the men of the Merchant Marine. Give generously to this fund. The welfare of the Merchant Marine is vital to the nation's war effort.

Japs Massing Million Troops In Manchuria

By The Canadian Press

High Chinese quarters declared today Japan had massed nearly 1,000,000 troops in Manchuria and said new advices indicated the Japanese planned to strike at Russian Siberia some time in July.

Neutral observers, however, expressed belief Japan would not risk taking on a new enemy until Hitler had started his long-delayed offensive against Russia—and until she was sure that the German push was succeeding.

Russia and Japan have a five-year neutrality and "friendship" pact, signed April 13, 1941, which so far has been observed.

High quarters in Chungking, Chinese wartime capital, said the Japanese general staff preferred to postpone further thrusts into the south seas in favor of strategy affecting territory nearer Japan.

2 MAIN OBJECTIVES

With this in mind, the Chinese said, Japan has two principal objectives—Hawaii and Siberia. But the American victory in the battle of Midway frustrated any Japanese plan for an attack on Hawaii, and Japan therefore was expected to turn against Siberia.

On the China fighting front, Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's Chinese armies doggedly fought against a dozen or more Japanese invasion columns, chiefly in the eastern and southern provinces.

In the battle of Australia, an allied spokesman said the Japanese were using two new type planes—a lighter Zero fighter and a cannon-equipped medium bomber.

Ask Development North Tar Sands

CALGARY, June 19.—(CP)—Development of the Athabasca tar sands in the far north of the province with a view to obtaining maximum production of gasoline and oil is urged upon the Dominion government in a resolution passed at a recent meeting and just forwarded to Ottawa by the United Farmers of Alberta.

The resolution states it is imperative that maximum use be made of any known natural resource for the production of gasoline and lubricating oil and other derivatives of petroleum.

"It has been known for many years that thousands of acres of tar sands, many yards in depth, highly impregnated with petroleum, exist in the Athabasca area," the resolution asserts.

It is pointed out that all necessary exploratory and preliminary work has been completed at the site of the sands.

NEW EXECUTIVE MEETS

Chamber Honors Men Armed Services

Honorary Membership Following Discharge Unanimously Approved

A resolution asking that the Edmonton Junior Chamber of Commerce give former members of the body now serving in the armed services, one year's honorary membership following their discharge, was passed unanimously at the first meeting of the newly-elected executive of the chamber, held Thursday night.

The meeting was held at the office of the senior chamber with Gordon Nevion, president, in the chair. Gordon Campbell was appointed secretary and Jack Hamshaw will take over the duties of treasurer for the fiscal year which officially began on June 1.

The executive decided unanimously to ask Jack Weber to continue as chairman of the salvage campaign committee.

Upon recommendation of the outgoing executive the new officers decided to launch immediately the membership drive for 1942-43.

Two resolutions that will be forwarded to the executive of the Dominion Junior Chamber of Commerce were drafted. One was an invitation to the Dominion body to have their 1943 annual meeting held at Edmonton.

It was forwarded to Windsor, Ont., where the 1942 annual meeting will be held on June 25, 26, and 27. Jack Weber, local delegate to the meeting, was instructed to invite them personally to Edmonton for 1943 and it was decided to ask Mayor John W. Fry to extend a written invitation to them on behalf of the city.

The other resolution forwarded to the Dominion annual meeting stated that the body adopt the policy of the local body of giving an honorary membership for one year to chamber members now serving in the armed forces.

Both resolutions were passed unanimously.

Felicitations Exchanged By Youth Groups

Correlation of efforts by the peoples of the British Empire and the Soviet Union were lauded at the second Soviet Youth Anti-Fascist meeting held in Moscow last week, according to word received by the Edmonton Youth Council.

Chairman of the local council, "Joe" McKenzie received a telegram this week from the chairman of the Soviet meeting declaring that the friendship of the British and Soviet peoples in their war efforts will remain unshakable, and that the fellowship in arms of the British and Soviet youth will grow closer and firmer.

FIRMER TIES

The telegram, sent by Eugene Fyodorov, chairman of the Soviet Youth meeting which commenced June 7, read "Our meeting was very pleased to receive your message. Friendship of British and Soviet peoples in their efforts defeat agencies of Fascism is unshakable. Fellowship in arms of British and Soviet youth will grow closer and firmer. Let us by our joint effort smash the enemy in 1942."

On learning of the proposed meeting in Moscow, the second of its kind, the Edmonton Youth Council had sent greetings and wishes for full success to the assembly to be attended by youths from all parts of Russia, and praise of the tremendous accomplishments of the Russian forces in the effort to defeat the Nazi war machine.

Getting Around with Jack DeLong

Despite the great part played by carrier based planes in the smashing United Nations' victories of the Coral Sea and Midway, a war commentary by Richard K. Montgomery of the United Press, warns against jumping to conclusions.

The planes from a carrier are no match, he states, for the heavy bombers based on land that can hit hard and return to their bases, where the lighter sea based planes dare not attack.

And while the planes carried by the carrier can not swap punches with big land based planes the car-

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

Has the wave of opposition to Prime Minister Churchill which swept through the House of Commons benchers subsided?

THE ANSWERS

GERALD O'CONNOR, K.C., barrister: The full-scale bombings of Germany, the tri-party pact between the United States, Britain and the Soviet, in which agreement on a second European front was reached has stilled, for the present at least, the voice of criticism in Britain. Churchill is stronger today in the confidence of the British peoples and of the peoples of the United Nations than at any previous time.

V

HARRY JONES, carpenter: Churchill is the personification of the British fighting spirit. He embodies the hopes and aspirations of the British Empire as few men have ever done. For the greater part of 20 years he tried to tell the peoples of the world what was coming, but they failed to listen to him. His loudest critics are those who scoffed at his warnings. I would appear they cannot forgive him for being right when they were wrong.

V

MARK PATTERSON, farmer: The recent by-election results in Britain would indicate that Churchill is as strongly entrenched as ever in the favor of the British people. He will long continue to hold their favor and esteem.

Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., and Film Producer Herbert Wilcox in presenting the stage production, "Celebrity Parade," in nine of the principal cities of Canada. It will play the Empire theatre in Edmonton, Saturday evening, June 27. Total proceeds will go to the Air Marshal Bishop Fund in aid of the Air Cadets League.

Entire Dominion To Pay Tribute Gallant Soldiers Of New Army

Canada's determined, gallant, unsurpassed army will be honored during the week June 28-July 5. The stated period in which the troops will be honored will be preceded in this city by a parade of troops of the Edmonton Garrison, on Sunday, June 28. It will be a gala event, with all units represented.

In Army Week, the public will honor the Canadian Army. It was the Canadian Corps and its achievements in the Great War of 1914-1918 that caused the entire world to pay homage to this country. The triumphs of the mighty Canadian Corps brought honor and glory to the country. The entire world looked up to Canada. The terrific battles fought by the Corps were tempered with stories of almost unbelievable heroism and achievement.

What can Canadians, particularly veterans, do to help the development of the Canadian Army? Defence Minister Ralston outlines three specific ways in which the average citizen can help.

HELP WITH CADETS

"First, you can help with the cadets. You can actively encourage and inspire the boys to get into cadet corps in the schools and to learn the fundamentals of soldiering. It will save precious time later if they get the spirit and training of the army now.

"Secondly, you can help with the active army. You are doing it now in connection with the auxiliary services. But you and you alone can pass on to the fighting men of today some idea of what the brotherhood of arms means. We forget that there are many of the men in the fighting forces today who weren't born when the last war ended and a great majority of them probably weren't more than four or five years old on armistice day.

GLORIOUS VIMY

"Vimy to them is only what they read in their history books or hear old soldiers reminisce. It is men like you who can tell them what it means to be 'buddies.' There is many a man and you know it who went over the top because he wanted to be 'with the boys' and wouldn't let them down. That's why you're still sticking together after 25 years have gone past. Your interest and encouragement means everything to these lads.

HELP RESERVE

"Thirdly you can help with the reserve army. Turn out with the reserve army. Limber up the creaky joints. Give them the benefit of your own knowledge and your own experience and your backing. Help to form from the citizenry of this country a home guard that will be fit and ready to do its part along with the active army if ever the need comes."

Veterans' Guard Needs Recruits Fill Vacancies

In announcing recruiting of more men for the Veterans' Guard of Canada, Maj. J. H. Gainor, M.C., district recruiting officer for M.D. 13, paid a high tribute to the men who have served in the guard since the start of the war.

For Valor

The Victoria Cross, the highest gift in the award of His Majesty the King. It is conferred "For Valor". It is made from cannon captured from the enemy.

Victoria Cross Is From Enemy Cannon

It was established in 1856 by Queen Victoria, on the suggestion of the prince consort, as a reward for individual acts of supreme gallantry by either officers or men.

In the royal warrant it was ordained that "the cross shall only be awarded to those officers or men who have served in the presence of the enemy, and shall have performed some signal act of valor or devotion to their country."

The cross is of modest bronze, cast from captured cannon. On the obverse is the royal crest of a lion above the British crown, with a ribbon beneath it inscribed "for valour." On the back of the suspender from which the cross hangs is recorded the name, rank and other particulars of the recipient. The back of the cross carries a record of the act for which the decoration was awarded. The holder is entitled to V.C. after his name.

In the event that it is awarded twice by one man a replica cross is added to the ribbon. This has happened only twice in the approximately 1,000 times it has been given.

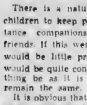
Your Baby And Mine

There is a natural desire in all children to keep pace or to outdistance companions, relatives and friends. If this were not true there would be little progress. Everyone would be quite content to let everything be as it is and for him to remain the same.

It is obvious that because of mental, physical and economic handicaps it is harder for some children to meet the normal competition of companions or brothers and sisters. This inability "to make the grade" gives rise to a feeling of inferiority, so disagreeable an emotion as to inspire the child to try by any method to overcome it.



ELDRED

A feeling of inferiority may be of real advantage when it spurs on the individual to extraordinary efforts to compensate for what he thinks to be mental, physical or social disadvantages. It is such efforts which account for the ferocity with which some mentally inferior children plunge into athletic contests, and become heroes. It accounts for the frequency with which physically inferior children make themselves scholastically pre-eminent. It accounts most of all for the common phenomenon of a younger brother or sister skipping grades and bringing himself up to scholastic equality with the older child.

These are legitimate methods of squelching feelings of inferiority. Unless the mother can convince the child of the lack of necessity for such prodigious efforts, she does well to encourage them. They do compensate the child for whatever inequalities he considers himself to be suffering.

The real tragedy arises when a child has no legitimate opportunities and, thinking that he cannot be the "best" child in the family or school, he salves his feelings by being the "worst" one. He picks on weaker children in order to be successful in combat.

He retreats from an unhappy reality and becomes an amazing teller of tall tales. He becomes a clever sneak thief to win the admiration of hoodlums because the "nice" boys won't pal on him.

The question all parents and teachers should ask themselves is: What can we do to help the child who is suffering from a feeling of being less capable, less smart, less socially secure? He needs and must have admiration and attention. How shall that be managed?

When the parent has discovered the sore spot which is causing a child to misbehave, the answer to that is not punishment but an understanding of his personal problem and an effort to show him the road which will be happily satisfying to him. All children have some capacities some talents and skills which must serve as a ladder to the superiority they crave.

Our leaflet, "Undesirable Punishments" may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

What To Do

Will you please give me a suggestion for decorating a small den, that will be both attractive and unusual?

Answer—I think one of the cleverest and most decorative things you can do to a den is cover one whole wall with a map of the world. In wartime it is particularly interesting—and you may follow the trend of the fighting without much difficulty. Of course you would need a fair sized wall—and one with no breaks in it. Also you would be unable to place large furniture against this wall.

If you like the map idea you can have one covering the whole floor of your room. Carry out oceans and water in dark, rich blue, and the rest of the map in red and white. Continue the red, white and blue theme through your room with stripes of blue and white stripes, and red upholstered easy chairs.

Fresh vegetables should be thoroughly cleaned with a vegetable brush under running water in order to remove all trace of grit or poison spray. The water that clings after the final washing usually affords sufficient moisture to start the cooking process, especially where the heavy aluminum pans are used. With a little care, almost any vegetable may be entirely cooked in practically its own juice, whether on top of the stove or by baking. Many vegetables which are commonly cooked by boiling or steaming may be given a desirable and different flavor by baking, such as ground beefs, turnips, carrots, etc. The flavor may be varied by slightly browning on top.

In either boiling or baking vegetables, avoid over-cooking, and be sparing of the water added. A little careful practice, with the proper cooking utensils, will more than repay you in the better flavor and actual benefit derived from fresh or canned vegetables.

It is believed by some that the vitamins in vegetables are lessened through the process of canning, but with our modern method of canning, the loss of vitamins is so slight as to be of no consequence. My advice is to stock your pantry with a variety of canned vegetables to be used when the fresh ones are not obtainable, and thus guarantee yourself a plentiful supply of the essential minerals every day in the year.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy, Los Angeles, Calif.

Stay-At-Home Men Should Be Prized

Tired Male Should Not Be Attacked For Wanting to Rest Beside Fireside: Most Women Content Selves By Crying Over Forlorn State

A young woman who murdered her husband because she asked him to take her stepping and he refused and told her to go to bed, has been acquitted by a jury of her peers, 12 women, all of whom probably had felt like slaying their own husbands under similar provocation, but had lacked the nerve to do it.

Dorothy Dix

Let us hope and pray that this case will not set a precedent for justifiable homicide and make a husband, wanting to stay at home at night and rest his feet when his wife wants to go dancing, one of the crimes that entitle her to shoot him on sight. Heaven knows it has seemed bad enough for the poor tired business man to be divorced by his wife because he didn't feel frolicsome after toiling for eight or ten hours to provide her with beauty treatments and fine clothes, but for her to commit mayhem upon him for that reason is really carrying the matter a little too far.

Most women stop short of that and content themselves with shedding a few buckets of tears over their forlorn lots and telling their friends about how mean and selfish their husbands are, and how little they appreciate all they do for them, telephoning in the grocery order every day and spending the morning looking for bargains that have been marked down from $60 to $59.98.

This emotional outlet conduces to the safety of husbands and makes marriage a less dangerous occupation than it would otherwise be for them, but it does not remove wives' ancient grievance about having husbands who are not willing to play around with them of evenings.

Probably there is no other one thing, unless it be the bills, over which husbands and wives have so many fights as they do over the amusement question, for men looks at it from a different and purely personal point of view.

The woman who is tied down with little children and has nothing more exciting to listen to all day than the baby's da-da and the eternal cry for m-o-t-h-e-r wants her husband to entertain her with brilliant and scintillating conversation when he is at home, and tell funny stories that will set the dinner table in a roar. And when he retires, with his pipe and the evening paper, and pases into silence as soon as he has gorged himself, she feels like ramming the pipe down his throat and choking him to death on the war news.

The housewife who cooks and scrubs and patches and mends and has nothing to occupy her mind, except to think how bored she is, wants to do something of an evening that will give her a change, if it is no more than to go window shopping, or to play bridge with the Joneses, or eat a hamburger that she didn't cook herself, and she thinks her husband an old meanie for not going gadding with her.

APPEAR IN PUBLIC

And the woman, who thinks herself a good-looker and has an expensive new evening gown, wants to flaunt in public where she will be seen and be seen. She practically married to get a permanent date who would take her out and give her a good time, and when she finds that she almost has to chloroform him to get him into his evening clothes and that on all festive occasions he sits around looking like an early Christian martyr, she bemoans herself as another victim of marriage.

The husband, on his part, who is mentally and physically worn to a frazzle with his day's work, who has talked and been talked to until he hates the sound of the human voice, who desires nothing on earth so much as just spending the evening slumped on the living-room couch, can't for the life of him see why his wife wants to gad the streets, or go to see a silly movie, or visit the Joneses and listen to Jones tell how the war should be won and Mrs. Jones discourse about the baby's teeth.

There you are. And there is no use in telling the wife to compromise by taking her fun in the afternoons, for half of a woman's pleasure is in parading her husband in public, no matter how gloomy he looks. So there is nothing to be done about it. But really the poor man shouldn't be killed for balking. That is too severe a punishment, though I have heard men say they would rather be shot than go to the Smiths' party.

Newton is convening the affair, assisted by Mrs. J. Michael, Mrs. R. L. Jackson, Mrs. W. D. Batters, Mrs. Alan Nicholls, Mrs. E. B. Wilson and Mrs. J. R. Turner.

CHAIRMAN

Mrs. Frank J. Conroy, who has been appointed regional chairman in charge of the transcription of information contained in application forms for sugar ration cards. This work is being undertaken by 20,000 volunteer Canadian women in conjunction with the government's system of sugar rationing. Mrs. Conroy is chairman of the work in this district and has to assist her Mrs. R. L. Nicholson, Calgary; Mrs. A. S. Fumerton, Lethbridge, and Miss M. Fowler, Medicine Hat.

Women To Aid In Compiling Ration Cards

In the biggest task yet assigned them, Canadian women will form a volunteer army of 20,000 to go on duty throughout the dominion between the dates of June 26 and June 30, to transcribe the information contained in millions of application cards to 12,000,000 sugar ration cards. The organization will function under the consumer's branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and admirations of the ready response of volunteers is expressed by the board.

In Alberta, upwards of 1,000 women are needed to assist in the work.

For operational purposes there is a divisional zoning of 13 regions, each headed up by a regional chairman, assisted by supervisors, and each in turn heading up strong committees of women. Recording will be done in 106 centres, where supervisors and their committees will assume responsibility.

Mrs. Frank J. Conroy of Edmonton is regional chairman assisted by district supervisors, including Mrs. R. L. Nicholson of Calgary, Mrs. A. S. Fumerton of Lethbridge, and Miss M. Fowler of Medicine Hat.

The work of these patriotic volunteers will be the clerical job of writing names and addresses on ration cards. Their responsibility is to get these cards out by July 1. They will be the laurels of a regular army in Canada at war, for they will save the dominion immense sums of money for diversion into the tools of war.

Work Of City War Services Clubs Told

LITTLE is known by the average Edmonton citizen of the work in hospitality to service men that is being offered by many, through the United Services Y.M.C.A. Club and the Air Force Mothers' Auxiliary, working under supervision of the Community Service Committee of Auxiliary War Services.

The United Services Y.M.C.A. Club formerly known as the "Rookies House," was formally opened early in March, 1940. Senior hostesses on duty invited service men, who were away from their homes, to be guests for meals. The Air Force Mothers' Auxiliary formed in December, 1940, was organized to look after airmen here at the various training schools. In the fall of 1941, serving men, mostly air force, started into the city in such numbers that there two clubs felt that these ladd really needed much of men's life. Since October, 1941, there has been a hostess convener at the Y.M.C.A. United Services Club. Names of citizens are put up each week as hostesses to men in all services. Men are put up for leaves ranging from 36 hours to two weeks.

The "Wings Club," now known as the Navy, Army and Wings Club, places men on leave in city homes. Last Saturday evening, 15 men were placed from the "Y." 11 from the "Wings Club," mostly for 48 hours leave. But during the week boys who came in from many points were put up for leaves of 7 to 14 days.

INFORMATION DESK

Since the middle of March of this year, the Co-ordinating Council for Auxiliary War Services has had an information desk in the Y.M.C.A. club rooms and Mrs. C. V. Dacre is on the job between the hours of 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. daily. Mrs. Arnold Tayler is hostess convener for the United Services Club, hostess chairman of the co-ordinating council, and secretary of the Air Force Mothers' Auxiliary, so is in closc contact with members of the clubs.

At Christmas time, through the Y.M.C.A. office, over 300 service men were given Christmas and New Year hospitality. The telephone in the club room was manned from 10 in the morning until 10 at night by members of the club and air force mothers.

At Easter, 250 men from the Midland Regiment were given hospitality under the convenership of Mrs. H. M. E. Evans.

Some citizens who have taken boys into their homes have made them so much at home that the boys return each leave. The club tries to place Scotch boys in Scotch homes, Irish boys in Irish homes, musical boys in musical homes, etc.

Quality, Style Not Sacrificed Today's Clothes

TORONTO, June 19.— (CP) — Canadian fashion has a front-line role in the national war effort but neither style or quality will be sacrificed for wartime yardage restrictions, J. A. Klein, administrator of women's and children's clothing for the wartime prices and trade board said here this week.

Fashion writers at a preview of next season's wartime clothes at which Mr. Klein spoke compared new styles with old and decided that milady's new "Victory suit" was equally as chic as last season's models.

Material saved in excessive yardage restrictions would make uniforms for Canada's fighting men and women, Mr. Klein said. Consumers would benefit financially under the new rationing regime. Decrease in material would result in lower prices in most cases.

Round-pleated skirts, bloused backs and front fullness still appear in victory dresses. Redingotes—dresses with long coats of the same material—and dresses with matching jackets are on the black list. Flap pockets and long jackets are "out."

Length for daytime frocks is 43 inches—for evening gowns 50 inches.

Greatest material saving is on the redingote. The new order decrees a clever imitation of the favorite coat dress which saves three yards per garment. Out of every 100 restricted redingotes, manufacturers now can make 200.

Nightgowns, housecoats and evening clothes have received the severest cut. Saving on 100 victory gowns is 133 1-3 yards.

WOOL RATIONING

Wool rationing will be more strict than restrictions on cotton and rayon but "there will be no serious shortage of any materials if the consumer refrains from abnormal buying," Mr. Klein said.

Mr. Klein doesn't think much of the woman who tries to beat restrictions by making her own clothes.

"We can't police the stores to see if women buy extra yardage to do their own dressmaking," he said "But the over-dressed woman today is as unpatriotically conspicuous as though she wore a Japanese kimona."

Sugar Ration Coupons Issued

COUPON RATIONING HERE

"Housewives' Brigade" Plays Big Role In Britain's War Effort

LONDON, June '7—(CP)—When the war's history is written the part of Britain's "Housewives' Brigade" played to stock the Empire's arsenal will be engraved in bold letters. At a conference of the Women's Trade Union Congress, delegates minced no words in describing the task British women are performing to produce modern munitions.

"Women, equally with men, are helping to win the war," declared Miss F. Hancock, chairman during the session. "They are doing a class of work which we never believed they would undertake. They are at work in the open, lifting and painting steel girders. They are handling explosive powders which they can only touch for short periods because of the risk of contracting dermatitis and personal disfigurement. They are doing the job cheerfully, however, and are as determined as men to endure whatever hardships are necessary."

KEEP HOMES, WORK

Miss Hancock didn't mention the "Housewives' Brigade" — women with a house, husband and family to look after—but they, too, are sharing the burdens shouldered by girls called into services and war factories.

Thousands of married women outside the call-up age and living within easy distance of factories have volunteered to combine housework and war work. Officials declare they are as deft and efficient as younger girls.

Typical of the spirit displayed by the unofficially recognized body are the women at a certain village in Surrey. They banded together and converted the village hall into a factory for making aircraft engine covers. The factory employs only two full-time workers, a supervisor and an assistant. The 48 others work at least five hours daily, six days a week.

30 TO 72

A big Midlands factory employs about 300 part-time workers, women who rise early, house clean and pack their children off to school. Then they go out to work. The youngest is 30 and the oldest 72, white haired Mrs. James Topping. She trudges three miles a day for the afternoon shift.

The "Housewives' Brigade" is growing steadily, but authorities estimate there are still about 1,500,000 married women who are not devoting a few hours each week to war work.

"To them the war is still an affair for the woman next door," was one comment. "They prefer bridge or shopping. Production will never be up to standard until we get those women—and we will in the end."

MEDAL WINNER

Mrs. Frances Walsh, 29, a Calgary school teacher, is the first Canadian woman to win the George Medal. She risked her life attempting to rescue the pilot of a burning plane which crashed near Airdrie, Alta., but the pilot later died. The award was announced in the King's birthday honor list.

National I.O.D.E. Protests Statement By Justice Minister

TORONTO, June 19.—(CP)—The national executive committee of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire in a declaration yesterday protested a reported statement by Justice Minister St. Laurent in the house of commons Tuesday.

The declaration quoted Mr. St. Laurent as saying French-Canadians "feel Canada is in this war on its own and for its own interests and survival." It was issued and signed by the order's national president, Mrs. W. B. Hoskins, after an emergency meeting of the national executive committee.

The declaration said in part: "We believe that 'loyalty' based on 'the utilitarian viewpoint' as suggested by the honorable Mr. St. Laurent is selfish and without soul and citizens so restricted in outlook can make no contribution to the welfare of the country, nor are able 'to exercise judgment and discretion in respect of legislation deemed to be for the good of the country.'"

Get Supply Of Vitamin C In Summer Beverages

By MRS. GAYYNOR MADDOX

Tire and gasoline restrictions make it important to use foods that will keep longer in the refrigerator and therefore can be bought in larger quantities. Oranges, lemons and grapefruit, ideal for summer "coolers," can be kept in a cool, dry place for at least two weeks.

ORANGE COOLER

(Makes 1½ quarts)

Two cups orange juice, ¼ cup lemon juice, ¼ cup maraschino cherry juice, 1 cup ginger ale, 2 tablespoons honey, 1 pint vanilla ice cream, 2 tablespoons sliced maraschino cherries.

Mix fruit juices, and ginger ale; add honey; mix well. Chill thoroughly. Add ice cream; stir until blended. Serve in chilled glasses and top with cherry slices.

CITRUS GINGER ALE PUNCH

(Serves 12 to 15)

One quart orange ice, 2 quarts ginger ale, orange slices, maraschino cherries with stems, sprigs of mint leaves.

Place orange ice in punch bowl and pour in ginger ale. Garnish with orange slices cut attractively and floated in punch. Also add cherries and sprigs of mint.

ORANGE AND MELON DELIGHT

One medium honey dew melon, 8 oranges, 2 lemons.

Chill melon and scoop out 24 balls. Extract juice from rest of melon, oranges and lemons; combine melon juice, orange and lemon juice, and chill well. Fill glasses, adding melon balls as a garnish. Serve cold.

Sunday's Menu

Debunker

This superstition seems to date back to ancient times in Egypt when the pyramids were being built. The workmen were given great quantities of onions and garlic to eat, under the assumption that strong food makes a strong man. Modern science has shown that these foods do not make men strong any more than other foods, and not as much as many foods.

Violates By-Laws, Draws Double Fine

Pleading guilty to charges arising from breaches of two city traffic by-laws, Tony Ross, Edmonton, was fined $2 and costs on each count, for a total of $4. He was given an option of four days in jail in default of payment of each fine.

He was parked on the wrong side of the street and in pulling out from the curb he failed to signal, striking an approaching car. When traffic police arrived to check on the accident they found that Ross was driving with no driver's license in his possession.

Getting Around

rier itself is perhaps the most vulnerable ship afloat, a big target, easily crippled.

Here are some of Mr. Montgomery's observations:

The carrier is most effective in mid-ocean, beyond the challenging reach of land-based bombers and fighters.

But, even there, it is extremely vulnerable to the planes launched from the carrier of an opposing fleet.

The side which spots the enemy first can knock out his strength and win the battle, before it begins.

That was the United Nations' good fortune at Coral Sea and Midway, and we also had the advantage of calling upon land-based bombers.

In some attacks Allied carriers have caught the enemy napping and hobbled their air strength—before our carriers could be knocked out.

In evaluating air and sea warfare, therefore, present-day carriers apparently cannot be considered a cure-all. They're a make shift that enables a fleet to take airpower to sea, but they're not the perfect weapon a battleship once was.

The dreadnaught, in the day before the plane, could stand and slug it out with any ship afloat, it was master of the sea.

It took more than one hit to knock a battleship out, and still does. Not so a carrier, whose flight deck can be crumpled by a single bomb thus rendering her useless.

In planning for the future, naval-air power will compensate for the vulnerability of carriers. Three courses are opened:

Perhaps the design of the carrier can be altered, to give her a tougher hide. Heavy plating for her deck and under-water surfaces, of course, will cut down her speed and introduce new handicaps.

Perhaps the answer lies in building so many carriers that the navy can afford the toll taken in battle. Like the vulnerable planes themselves, it may be necessary to build carriers in anticipation of steady losses.

The third course is the development of longer-range land planes based on bases from which they can operate. In areas dominated by the arm of friendly land-based airpower, a fleet needs worry only about stray air attacks and submarine raiders.

Ladd range heavy bombers are among the strongest weapons in the possession of the United Nations. Already Britain's bombers have struck lethal blows in many theatres of war—far from their operating bases.

But when the time comes to blast a path toward Japan, we're going to have to plunge into a hornets nest. For Japan is so well protected by islands, from which land-based planes can operate, that a carrier based air fleet will be operating at a disadvantage.

The first goal of the Pacific offensive, when it comes, thus will be to hurl long range bombers at Japanese outposts to cripple their air power. Then and only then can carrier-based planes and warships close in safely for an attack to overwhelm the defenders and grab essential bases.

Chest Arranges Plans For Next Annual Drive

Preliminary plans for the second annual drive of the Community Chest of Edmonton to raise funds for its 27 organizations for 1943 needs are made at a meeting of the directors of the fund in the Macdonald hotel, Thursday night. Approximately $80,000 will be sought in the drive. Harvey Harrison, president, was in the chair.

Elmer E. Roper was named chairman of the campaign committee, and Mrs. S. H. Gandier chairman of the women's division.

Organization work for the drive will start in the immediate future. Treasurer J. G. Nickerson reported that all pledges are being maintained very well and that the amount of money subscribed is coming in regularly.

Chairman of the budget committee, Julian Garrett told the meeting that the committee is meeting regularly for the purpose of checking on the budget requirements of the affiliated organizations. No emergencies of a major nature have occurred resulting in extra demands for funds from any of the 27 welfare groups, he said.

250,000 TONS OF SHIPPING SUNK

R.A.F. Blasts Supply Line For Hun Second Front Army

Serious Transportation "Bottleneck" Developing From Constant Air Blows

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON, June 19.—(BUP)—The Royal Air Force has sunk or damaged well over 750,000 tons of German shipping in the last year of attacks on Adolf Hitler's supply lines to his so far passive "second front" stretching around western and northern Europe, a compilation of official reports showed last night.

Almost daily throughout the year the R.A.F.'s coastal command bombers blasted gaps in tenuous sea communications upon which Germany depends heavily to sustain the 20 or so divisions held in readiness for the opening of a western front by the Allies.

The Germans have used convoys of small ships hugging the coasts to ease the strain on badly overworked and run down railroad supply lines for the occupation armies in Norway, Holland, Belgium and France.

IMPOSING STRAIN

Germany's merchant shipping at the outbreak of the war totalled only 4,500,000 tons. The loss or disablement of considerably more than 750,000 tons in a year unquestionably placed an imposing strain on German shipyards whose entire resources are needed for submarine construction.

On the basis of individual announcements and R.A.F. communiques, at least 84 German ships of various sizes were sunk or probably sunk on the coastal lanes in the last year. The tonnage of many was not announced, but by conservative estimate no less than 250,000 tons must have been sent to the bottom or permanently put out of action.

The R.A.F. never has announced the total results of the dogged attacks, which have received relatively little notice. But the mass statistics gave weight to the regular bombing of the German sea lanes in the English channel and the North Sea.

Considered in the light of Germany's known transport crisis, the steady toll exacted from the convoys obviously constituted a formidable menace to the sprawling communications system.

R.A.F. announcements showed that in the first two weeks of the coastal command's spring offensive last month, 28 German ships were sunk or damaged off the Norwegian, Danish and Dutch coasts.

SPY OUT ROUTES

Day after day Beaufighter reconnaissance planes spy on the coastal routes for German vessels attempting to sneak through. If the hunt is successful and the weather favorable, they are followed by Hudson bombers.

Ships bound for Norway carry munitions, aircraft spares, and supplies, as well as equipment for the new German naval base at Trondheim where warships lurk to attack Allied convoys bound for Russia. They also carry supplies for the German garrison on the Murmansk front. Usually the ships return with iron ore, timber, wood pulp and pyrites for German arms factories.

The slender resources of the German navy seldom enable it to send out more than small torpedo boats, minesweepers, armed trawlers and anti-aircraft ships to guard the convoys.

Last winter the navy was compelled to call up virtually every German who ever served aboard ship. Among them were many middle-aged veterans of the first world war. They were pressed into escort duty because of the shortage of crews, and casualties were notoriously high.

RAIL DIFFICULTIES

New difficulties for the German transport system recently were revealed in reports reaching London. Wilhelm Kleinman, state secretary of the ministry of transport, was ousted last month. The state railway annual report published early in June admitted deterioration in the system, and warned that even more drastic cuts in passenger traffic probably would be necessary soon. The transport situation was described as a "serious bottleneck" demanding the "maximum effort" of railroad workers.

Reports from Berlin revealed that large numbers of locomotives were frozen and made useless on the eastern front during the winter. The Reich was reported to be trying to squeeze locomotives from neighboring countries, including Sweden and Finland.

Winnipeggers Pay Tribute To Neal

WINNIPEG, June 19—Winnipeg citizens paid an unique tribute to W. M. Neal, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and himself a Winnipegger of many years standing, at a complimentary dinner here last night to mark his promotion from the post of western rail chief to his present system supervisory position.

Premier John Bracken, of Manitoba, on behalf of the gathering of hundreds of Winnipeg business leaders presented Mr. Neal with a costly piece of hospital apparatus as a going away gift. But the gift didn't go away. Mr. Neal, a former president of the Winnipeg General Hospital, immediately presented the infra-red lamp installation to that body, with the specific provision that it should be used in the children's ward of the hospital. It will bear his name when it goes into use today.

The presentation, as Premier Bracken said marked the high degree of respect and affection in which Mr. Neal was held, not only as a prominent railroader but as a humanitarian by the people of Winnipeg. Other verbal tributes were paid by various speakers, including the chairman George H. Stewart, president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade. Mr. Neal, who had returned from Montreal specifically for the citizens' dinner, has been, with Mrs. Neal the guests of honor of many official and private functions during his stay here. He returns to eastern Canada early next week.

Army Tributes Now For Glory To Come Asked

WINNIPEG, June 19.—(CP)—J. W. G. Clark of Ottawa, director of public relations for the Army and Royal Canadian Air Force, said here last night that "Army Week," June 29 to July 5, is the time for Canadians to pay tribute in advance of the army's "coming deeds of glory."

"In all wars past, and to come, victory takes the shape of a man standing on his two legs, straight up," he said in a dinner address at the annual convention of the Manitoba division, Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

HARD TO STOP

Mr. Clark told the newspaper men that if the Canadian army launches itself on a drive on the European continent "only something superhuman can stop it." If the enemy attacks the British Isles, "God help the Germans . . . for they will meet McNaughton's (Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton) men head on."

"Canada has an army to be proud of—an army compact and deadly . . . ready and eager for action," he said.

"This army of ours, in England, in training and serving in Canada, has had little glory, none in fact. And it was felt that now, in the 75th anniversary of our confederation, was a good time to have Canada pause, and pay tribute—in advance of its coming deeds of glory—to the man in khaki."

Mr. Clark said the lads of the R.C.A.F. are covering themselves with glory and the Royal Canadian Navy, growing in power every day, is performing magnificently on many seas and oceans.

"But the Canadian army has seen little action.

"When the waiting is over, when the ships have cleared the path, and the planes have emptied the sky, then the army moves. And in this war, and in all wars past, and to come, victory takes the shape of a man standing on his two legs, straight up—the soldiers!"

The Canadian army in England, under Gen. McNaughton, is for its size, one of the greatest and most powerful fighting forces in human history, Mr. Clark said.

Speaking of the soldiers, he said the infantryman of today is no longer a foot-soldier but a specialist in many lines, and is in better physical shape than the soldier of the last war.

Salt Tried For Road Surfacing

CALGARY, June 19—(CP)—Unable to buy road oil because of war demands, the city started an experiment with salt as a road surfacer yesterday. Dark, low-grade salt, in a saturated solution with water, was sprayed on the Edmonton highway within the city limits. Tank-wagons, formerly used to spread the oil, were spraying the salt mixture.

Salt is an expensive substitute for oil and its dust-laying properties have yet to be proven, according to City Commissioner J. A. Tweedie. The experiment will be confined to two or three of the arterial highway outlets within the city limits and the road to the Ogden shops. The salt is some the city had on hand for use of the municipal railway department. The switchpoints on the tram rail system are salted in the winter to keep them from coating with ice.

2nd War Vets Plan To Join With Legion

The Second Great War Veterans Association of Edmonton, formed here last spring, will pass out of existence and submerge its identity with the Canadian Legion if the provincial command of the Legion grants a charter for a second branch here.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Edmonton branch of the Legion, Thursday night, the membership gave approval to a report of a committee that had discussed merger with officers of the Second Great War Veterans Association.

At a meeting of the membership of the 2nd Great War Vets held early Thursday, decision was made to disband the organization and make application for a charter as a second branch of the Canadian Legion in Edmonton.

Officers of that organization reported the decision of their organization to the Legion gathering.

APPLY FOR CHARTER

An application will now be made to the Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion for a charter for the second branch of the Legion in Edmonton. If the Alberta Command recommends that a charter be issued the Edmonton branch of the Legion will then ask its membership to approve or reject the application.

Secretary J. H. Van Slyke gave a report to the Legion membership on deliberations between members of committees from the Legion and the 2nd Great War Veterans' Association.

The Legion committee had recommended that the second branch receive a charter. The new branch would have its own office space in the Memorial Hall and would collect its own dues.

The members would in other respects be subject to all the bylaws and regulations of the Legion and be under the discipline of the Memorial Hall management.

The new veterans have felt however, that their problems differ in many respects from the problems of veterans of the last war and therefore feel it will be best for them to deliberate in their own meetings under the name of New Veterans' Branch of the Canadian Legion.

CONVENTION REPORTS

Most of the session Thursday was taken up with reports of the annual convention of the Canadian Legion, held at Winnipeg recently, by delegates from the Edmonton branch who attended.

Those delivering reports were J. H. Van Slyke, President H. E. Tanner, Maj. R. Arthurs, G. C. Scott, Alex Riddell, W. R. McLaren, J. H. Van Slyke and Bowcott.

All delegates were enthusiastic about the work accomplished at the convention, which was described as the most impressive and business-like in history.

President Tanner, who was a member of the Rehabilitation committee at Winnipeg, stated that 99 resolutions were dealt with. Among the most important of those calls for caring for a retarded form of demobilization after this war, with each soldier being dealt in a job before being discharged; government programs of public works, such as home construction, slum clearance, farm settlement, were advocated, farm settlement, were advocated.

The convention also urged that post-war immigration be placed solely in the hands of the government, with no private corporations permitted to handle this problem.

The Canadian Legion Dominion Convention also urged a sound financial basis at the present time, it was revealed by Maj. Arthurs, who had been a member of the ways and means committee.

$37,776 SURPLUS

The dominion body has a cash surplus of $37,776 at the present time. The surplus for the last two years stands at more than $15,000 and the Legion has $10,000 invested in Dominion Government war bonds.

Advantages Of Second Front Are Outlined

If British and American forces do land in continental Europe to open up a second front, they will enjoy all the advantages of surprise, audacity, prestige and momentum which gave the Nazis their gains in the 1940 march across Europe.

This was the claim made by Harold L. Weir, associate editor of The Bulletin, in an address delivered Thursday night in St. Stephen's College at a banquet sponsored by the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts Secretary-Treasurers.

The banquet was held in connection with the association's fourth annual refresher course in municipal administration, which closes Friday in the Medical Building at the University of Alberta.

MINISTER ATTENDS

Donald E. Cameron, head of the university's department of extension, presided at the banquet. Others attending included Mrs. Cameron, Hon. Lucien Maynard, K.C., minister of municipal affairs, and Mrs. Maynard; and John E. Brownlee, K.C., and Mrs. Brownlee.

Subject of Mr. Weir's address was "A Review of the War."

Mr. Weir said that although he had been asked to review the war, it was impossible to give any move-by-move summary because the magnitude and multiplicity of the operations on the various fronts baffled the understanding and even the imagination.

Only, said the speaker, when the war is over, and we acquire a perspective in time, will we be able to intelligently evaluate what is going on today.

It was possible, however, he said, to draw several broad conclusions. For instance, an immediate end to the war did not seem to be possible because neither adversary was, at present, in a position to strike a decisive blow. Neither could win the war from where he, at the moment, stood. Thus, it is reasonable to believe that the struggle is in the process of undergoing great enlargement.

Hitler, said Mr. Weir, would probably try frantically to strike in the strong continental Europe sun before that concentration could strike at him.

If British and American forces land in continental Europe, as they are preparing to do now, they will enjoy all the advantages of surprise, audacity, prestige and momentum which gave the Nazis their gains in the 1940 march across Europe.

NOT READY FOR REVERSES

The Axis may be prepared, said the speaker, for a long war of successes. They probably intended in the beginning that their conquests would never cease. But they are not prepared nor are they capable of sustaining a succession of incidental reverses. Both military and political structures are geared to the momentum of their successes. Once that moral momentum of continuing success is lost, the war is lost, he said.

On the other hand, said Mr. Weir, the Allied nations are prepared to hold out for ten or even twenty years and take whatever blows and reverses that may come along.

In conclusion, the speaker outlined what he considered the true meaning of the war.

It was part of the great world revolution against special privilege and against materialistic greed and violence that have been endeavoring to stifle human liberty since the beginning of time.

"Hitler's war," declared Mr. Weir, "is a war of counter-revolution. He calls it the 'New Order.' It is an order as ancient as slavery. It is a practice as old as Cain."

Minor Blaze

After an extended lull in activity due to the wet weather, city firemen were called to Merrick's lunch shop at 10619 Jasper Ave. at 5:12 p.m. Thursday to put out a slight blaze in the kitchen.

The fire started behind the cooker and began spreading to the wall nearby when firemen arrived to extinguish the flames before much damage was done.

Victim of an accident in the Bush Mine where he was employed, Emil Miske, 8708 119 avenue, was admitted to the Royal Alexandra hospital Thursday afternoon.

Miske is suffering from injuries to his shoulder and side, caused when he was pinned between two cars in the mine. Several ribs were fractured and injuries to his shoulder are extensive.

Top Notch Stars Aiding Air Cadets

Fifteen top-notch stars of the stage and screen, representing both England and the United States, have combined their talents to make "Celebrity Parade" one of the most sensational presentations ever shown in Canada. It will be at the Empire theatre on Saturday, June 27. Among the stars are Anna Neagle and Dennis King. They, like all other members of the large cast, are giving their time and effort without compensation. In addition, the theatres, with and the services of their staffs, have been donated by Famous Players. Even the traveling expenses of the company have been provided for by gifts, so that every penny of the proceeds of the tour will go toward the work of the Air Cadets.

J. H. Wildman, chairman of the Edmonton committee, Air Cadets League, has announced that 75 per cent of the proceeds of the performance will stay in the city to further Air Cadet work. Edmonton has approximately 400 Air Cadets and it is expected that as many more will be added in the fall. The other 25 per cent of the proceeds will go to headquarters at Ottawa, to help with the work throughout the Dominion.

Exchange tickets are now on sale at Mike's News Stand and on the street floor of Hudson's Bay Company. These may be exchanged for reserved seats after 10 a.m., Monday, June 22. General sale of reserved seats will begin at the Empire theatre box office, Thursday, June 25.

PICTURES SHOW LAST HOURS OF AIRCRAFT CARRIER

Fires, Explosions Send Lexington To Bottom Of Sea

Two pictures, (left and above), showing the last hours of the aged U.S. aircraft carrier Lexington, were taken by navy photographers as the vessel burned fiercely after bomb and torpedo hits suffered in the battle of the Coral Sea, just before she exploded and sank. All personnel were rescued, but the Lexington's planes were probably lost. The attacking U.S. forces more than evened the score by sinking or damaging several Jap carriers along with cruisers, destroyers and transports assembled for an invasion attack against Australia.

Nurses Visit Outpost

First U.S. army nurse to arrive at a northern military outpost was First Lieut. Dorothy Kurtz (right), who was accompanied by a Canadian nursing sister, Margaret Douglas.

You Can Say That Again

As long as she makes still pictures like this, Jane Russell can continue to be a movie star who has never been seen in a movie.

Meeting Sets Stage For Final Act Of War Drama

Washington is confident that Great Britain, the U.S., the Soviet Union and China—now joined in mutual assistance agreements—will be able to develop in forthcoming conversations the basis for the better world. The broad principles have been set forth by the agreements signed by the U.S. with those countries. The one with the Soviet Union was signd by Cordell Hull, secretary of state, and Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet ambassador, a few hours after the results of recent conferences between President Roosevelt and Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotoff were announced. Here Roosevelt and Molotoff are seen at the White House as they talked "second front."

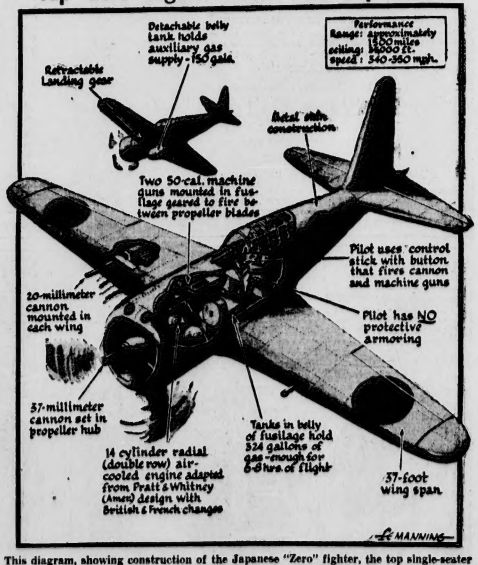
Farmerettes Gather In Early Strawberry Crop

Luscious red strawberries now are beginning to peep from verdant gardens in the Lake Shore district near Toronto. A score of pretty farmerettes, representing sections of Ontario, have started gathering the fruit at Oakville and Clarkson. Farmers believe the abundant rains and now the warm sun will provide an excellent crop of fruit this season. Hoeing away at the weeds in a choice strawberry patch on the farm of Harry Morden at Oakville (left photo) are two Belleville high school girls. They are Marion Diamond and Helen Douglas. Following a hard day's work of weeding and picking on the farm of Roy Bourne of Clarkson, two Toronto girls, Joan McKague (left), and Anne Clark (right), find relief for tired feet by splashing in a nearby pool.

Hollywood Honey

June Millarde—blonde, green-eyed, and nineteen—was to the movies born—her mother having been June Caprice, the actress, and her father the director of such screen hits as "Over the Hill" and "If Winter Comes." She lives with her maternal grandparents in Los Angeles and though born in New York City she considers herself a Californian. For the past four years she has been studying dramatics in various Hollywood schools of stage and screen. She rides well and frequently, swims, plays tennis—and her pet aversions are gossipy women, poor pictures and prize fights. Her first picture under her Warner contract is "Yankee Doodle Dandy" in which James Cagney is starred as the beloved Broadway star and playwright, George M. Cohan.

Jap "Zero" Fighter Leaves Pilot Unprotected



This diagram, showing construction of the Japanese "Zero" fighter, the top single-seater combat plane of the Japanese air force, shows how the design leaves the pilot with little protection against attacking aircraft. The Zero has shown up well in air warfare with the single exception of its vulnerability to attack.

Caribbean Crisis

By Eaton K. Goldthwaite

CHAPTER XIX

SOMEONE was standing in the corridor; someone's hand was on the knob of the door. Talcott was in a terrible spot then. If this were Halsey returning, he would spend the rest of his shipboard days in the brig. If it were the steward, wondering why he took so long, he would be a little better off. But he would have to show the envelope to prove good faith and the steward, when Halsey's search began, would remember. Why, he thought agonizedly, couldn't I have said a magazine?

The fumbling at the knob stopped and knuckles sounded against the polished wood panel. That wouldn't be Halsey. "Who's there?" Talcott called.

"May I come in?"

"Not just now. I'm dressing."

"Oh." Disappointment. Then, "All right. See you on deck."

Talcott waited, counting to 20 by hundreds, and with the envelope tucked under his arm, stepped nonchalantly to the corridor. The professor was gone and the steward was nowhere in sight. A short distance aft a couple blocked the passageway, discussing plans for the evening.

What to do with the envelope. Put it back? Halsey would immediately see the rip in the flap and would naturally assume that the true contents had been appropriated and blank paper substituted. No. Better to take the thing and heave it overboard. Unless— Could Struthers' report be written in invisible ink? Under ordinary circumstances such a thing would have smacked too much of fiction. Now, he wasn't so sure.

He couldn't hide it in his cabin. Search and discovery would leave him without a straw of defense. No. Find a hiding place, and soon. There wasn't much time—

He found it. In, of all places, the fire hose locker right beside the door to Halsey's stateroom. Only a snap-catch held its glass enclosed front and Talcott, swinging out the ribbon-racked hose, placed the envelope behind.

He was pacing the deck when he saw a lone figure leaning over the rail, watching the moon. It was June Paterson and at his approach she glanced up and then hastily away. "Hello," she said dispiritedly.

"Hello yourself," he replied with forced joviality. "Where are the rest of our playmates?"

"If you mean Martha Swenson, she's with the doctor. Looking at the moon. Maybe you'd like to join her."

He tucked her hand under his arm. "Let's find a couple of chairs and look at the moon ourselves. That is, if you can stand my company."

She didn't answer that, but she accompanied him. Which in itself was an answer of sorts. Forward they found two unoccupied chairs, a little apart from the others.

"You like to sit beside me?" asked June, as they sat watching the moon's path on the water.

"I do."

"Are you sure you trust me?"

"More than I trust myself."

She sighed. "I'm terribly glad. Really. I'm not a bad person. I just have the unhappy faculty of hurting most the people I want to hurt the least."

"I suppose you refer to your spying on MacDowell and me back on Abas Island?"

Her head turned quickly. "Spying? Do you mean the time I walked into MacDowell's room? I wasn't spying. You were so wrapped up in yourselves you didn't even hear me. And I was a little bit angry with you because you wouldn't take Leonard Halsey's suggestion."

"Halsey's?"

"Yes. It was he who told MacDowell to remind you of your rights of fighting extradition if you so desired. Didn't MacDowell tell you that?"

So that was how it was. MacDowell, still groggy from the blow on his head, had forgotten who gave him the idea. No wonder Halsey's attitude had changed. Halsey had been trying to help him, Halsey and the girl. Sighing he said, "I'm sorry June. I owe both you and Halsey an apology. I'm pretty much mixed up."

"I'm not surprised. I've kept silent because you acted so—so darned formal and disapproving. It was your attitude that made me mad. But I couldn't help noticing what was happening to you. You're not a criminal. I don't know what's behind all this, or why. But I do know you."

Suddenly he understood. Her petulance. Her seeming spoiledness. Her swift changes of mood. She, an old acquaintance and cousin of his best friend had been expecting fun, or at least a welcome. And how had he acted?

She was talking again; low, as if it were painful: "You forget that I grew up with Lowell. He was my ideal. Anything that he admired I admired, and your virtues and accomplishments were standard bywords. It was I who wormed you into our first blind date."

And he had doubted her! She was in effect confessing that she had fallen in love with him as a girl; that as a woman she had accepted him as a standard to be held above other men.

"You strong silent men! I shall be persistent. How much money are you supposed to have stolen?"

"—I can't discuss it, June."

"Is it your pride? I shall further cast mine to the winds to tell you that I visited Saint Thomas with the sole purpose and intent of seeing you."

"Good heavens!"

"It's true. You can imagine my chagrin when I discovered how far Abas was from Saint Thomas. I had the notion that it was right next door. Do I bore you?"

"No, no!" Against his will, it came out in a tumbling rush. Everything. The frameup, his suspicions, his fears. No smallest item did he leave out, even to discovering that the "report" in Halsey's envelope was nothing but sheets of blank paper.

At its end she was silent; so silent that he leaned over in annoyance, thinking she must have fallen asleep. But she was very much awake, and the flash in her eyes warned him to turn.

His room steward, the one he had asked about the grotesque bald-headed man, stood by his chair. "Mr. Talcott, sir? The gentleman, Mr. MacDowell, wishes to see you immediately. On the boat deck, sir. He said it was important."

The steward trotted away and Talcott climbed to his feet. June Paterson arose also, saying, "Now that we have completely bared our souls I'd like to enlist on your side. I'm really very clever."

He looked at her thoughtfully and suddenly gathering her in his arms, kissed her hard on the mouth. Nor did she try to pull away.

McKenney On Bridge

A great many of the country's outstanding bridge players are now serving in the armed forces of our country. One company has assembled what is perhaps the strongest team in the service. They have Morrie Elis, a Life Master and world's champion; Phil Abramsohn, another Life Master, and Melvin Lobell and Harold Ziman, two of New York's outstanding players. Elis' skill is shown in today's hand.

East was allowed to win the first trick. A club continuation was won by Elis, sitting North; A heart lead was won by dummy's king. North got back with the spade ace to lead the other heart, and the queen won. The ten of hearts then forced the ace West and North discarding low diamonds.

East led a third club. Dummy cashed two hearts, West discarding a diamond and a spade. It was apparent to Elis, with the drop of the ten of spades, that West must have the spade honors. So he then cashed the spade king and led a low spade. West was compelled to lead diamonds and give Elis two tricks in the suit for a score of four-odd.
